Women Speak at Lincoln Book Fair

Members and friends attending the Lincoln school PTA and book fair meeting Nov. 6, had a rare opportunity to hear two outstanding Highland Park women, Mrs. Inger Boye and Mrs. Hazel Cederborg, speak to the children during the assembly period.

Mrs. Boye reminded the children that books are bridges leading into many broad fields of living and understanding. She stressed particularly to the young readers, the value of understanding one's neighbor in order to live effectively today and to have a sound basis on which to build as an adult. She talked about the various kinds of bridges to build - bridges of friendship, of religious understanding, of good citizenship - as well as bridges of work and play.

Mrs. Cederborg delighted everybody with two of her own stories—"Obidiah Bunny's Thanksgiving Dinner" and "Noggin Squirrel's Red Cap." She, too, pointed out that lessons imbedded in the story are invaluable - that stories are the key-stone to the literary arch of the child's life. It has been her experience that through stories children can be taught life.

Friday night, Nov. 8, was the climax of the book fair. Movies were shown at 7:30 concluded by two drawings. Harold Rudolph, janitor of the school, won the basket of canned goods, and Mrs. Helen Finlay won the basket of fruit.

The following committee helped make the book fair a success: Mesdames Woll, Parks, Finlay, Pagenkopf, Jardine, Summers, Simpler, Cox, Guentz, A. Freeman, G. Freeman, Cederborg, Seitz, Norden, Molke, Tighe, Shannon, Ball, Jones, Lawrentz, Johnson and Sangerman.
