

Fires During 1946 Top Any Record In Country's History

Fires in 1946 caused more loss of life and greater property damage than in any previous year in this country's history, Chief Hennig pointed out today in urging increased fire protection vigilance during 1947.

Such tragic facts should stir every business man and housewife in the community to make his No. 1 New Year's resolution "Be Prepared for Fire," Mr. Hennig declared. He emphasized the necessity of frequent inspection of homes, stores and factories, not only to eliminate all possible causes of fire but to make sure that an adequate supply of approved fire extinguishers are located at strategic points.

Most fires are small at the start, he said. Quick, intelligent action at the outset is the key to preventing such tragic conflagrations as the recent Atlanta hotel fire. The formula is simple, the chief concluded. First, call the fire department; second, intelligently use first aid fire equipment; third, keep people out of the fire endangered area.

Competitive Examination For Draftsmen

An open competitive examination has been announced for the positions of draftsmen by the Corps of Engineers. Options included are as follows: Aeronautical, architectural, civil, electrical, map, mechanical, ship, statistical, structural, and general. Draftsmen receive from $1765 to $3397 a year depending upon the amount of experience acquired and responsibility assumed.

Employment will be in various federal agencies in the states of Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin.

Full information and application forms may be obtained from any first- or second-class post office.

Applications must be filed with the executive secretary, Corps of Engineers, at 609 Federal Bldg., Detroit 31, Michigan, not later than Feb. 5, 1947.

Eviction Ground Listed by OTC

Don't blame the office of temporary controls when you see a news picture of an evicted family and its belongings in the street.

Chances are, the OTC pointed out yesterday, that the tenants simply didn't pay their rent. And to clarify the OTC rent control office's position in such matters, the agency listed seven legal grounds on which landlords may obtain evictions, as follows:

1. If you refuse to renew your lease on the same terms and conditions, provided none of the provisions is contrary to rent regulations.

2. If you unreasonably refuse to let your landlord inspect the premises and show them to prospective purchasers.

3. If you violate a substantial obligation of your rental agreement. (However, your landlord must first give you written notice to cease the violation.)

4. If you are committing a nuisance of using the dwelling for immoral or illegal purposes.

5. If the landlord owned the property before rent control and has "an immediate and compelling necessity" to occupy the dwelling himself or is a veteran of World War II.

6. If you fail to pay the legal rent.

7. If your lease has expired and you are now subletting rather than occupying the dwelling yourself.

These grounds, the government agency pointed out, should answer the question, "Where was the OTC on that one?" Which readers frequently ask after seeing pictures of an eviction.

The OTC added that the number of evictions for nonpayment of rent has "greatly increased in the last few weeks."

Famous Artists Combine In Winnetka Concert

Paul Draper, tap-dance supreme, and Larry Adler, genius of the harmonica, will combine their artistry in what the New Yorker terms "a wow of a show" at the New Trier high school auditorium, Monday evening, Feb. 10, at 8:30, the last of this season's recital series sponsored by the Winnetka Music club.

Just how the idea came to young Draper to "tap the classics" is not recorded, but when he did, he tapped a reservoir of genius hidden within himself. He is a revelation of the heights to which tap-dancing can be lifted. He has at the tip of his toe all the precise beauty of the classical ballet, and can do leaps that would make star members of the Russian Ballet look to their laurels.

Larry Adler, of Baltimore, had his prelude to fame at the age of 14, when he won a prize in a contest for playing a Beethoven Minuet.

Surviving are his widow, Stella K.; a daughter, Mrs. Robt. Rosenthal, formerly of Highland Park and now living in New York; a granddaughter, Mrs. Edwin O. Curry, and a great-grandson, William Curry II, both of Highland Park.

He was 75 years of age on January 5.

2. Improvement where necessary to an already loyal and able municipal personnel;

3. The publication by the Council of the brochure entitled "The City Government, Highland Park, Illinois, 1946," which is the first comprehensive report rendered to the citizens by the city government and which—judging from the favorable reception accorded the publication—has helped to create a clearer understanding of the organization, functions, and finances of the city; and

4. Sponsorship and financial support of the comprehensive study resulting in the proposed City Plan and Amended Zoning Ordinance for Highland Park, which is now being made the subject of public hearings and which, it is hoped, will be enacted during the term of the present City Council. Long term and important benefits to the city and its residents should result from the adoption of the program recommended by the members of the Plan Commission and Zoning Committee.

To have had a part in these general accomplishments with Mayor Garnett, Commissioner Swanson, deceased, and with Commissioners Turner, Moroney, and Gourley, will be a continuing satisfaction to me. A large share of the credit for effectuating these results and for keeping the machinery of local government functioning in its gear goes to Highland Park's able City Clerk, V. C. Musser, and Corporation Counsel Paul C. Behanna.

I am indebted to the people of Highland Park and to the heads of the various city departments for the opportunity of having served them as a member of the City

Elderly Resident Succumbs to Illness

Private funeral services were conducted on Tuesday for Fred C. Cahn, resident of Highland Park since 1921, who passed away on Monday following a long illness.

Born in New York, he came to Chicago to live at the age of 21, and engaged in business in that city.

Surviving are his widow, Stella K.; a daughter, Mrs. Robt. Rosenthal, formerly of Highland Park and now living in New York; a granddaughter, Mrs. Edwin O. Curry, and a great-grandson, William Curry II, both of Highland Park.

He was 75 years of age on January 5.

Words to Live By

from ARTUR RODZINSKI

"Until you have become really, in actual fact, a brother to every one, brotherhood will not come to pass."—Dostoyevsky.

Arthur Rodzinski, famed conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, says: "In our orchestra we have many nationalities, creeds, types and temperaments. We have learned to forget individual likes, dislikes and differences of temperament for the sake of music to which we have dedicated our lives. I often wonder if we could not solve the world's problems on a similar basis of harmony."

"Think what a single individual in a symphony orchestra can accomplish by giving up his individual traits and ambitions in the service of music. Some call it cooperation, mutual understanding,
