A memo to Mr. Alexander Graham Bell

March 3, 1947, is the 100th anniversary of your birth. In your lifetime of service to others, you taught the deaf to speak, and made it possible for people separated by long distances to talk to each other. Not only in communication, but in aviation, eugenics, surgery, the recording of your invention, numerous other fields, the influence of your inventive genius and pioneering mind is felt.

Still living today, Mr. Bell, are people who recall how skeptics scoffed when you introduced your telephone. They said it was a fad, that it wouldn't last. But your vision of men communicating by word of mouth with other men in distant places became a reality. Your telephone has shaped the whole pattern of business and social life.

When you last visited Illinois Bell territory in 1918 the number of telephones here had grown to 700,000. Today the number is well over two million. People reach for those telephones ten million times a day to transact business, maintain family and community ties, and seek help in emergency. It requires 41,000 skilled men and women to provide that personal service. Your contributions to human progress are an inspiration to all of us here at Illinois Bell, and we pledge ourselves to carry on your spirit of service.

375,000 GREEK ORPHANS

Homeless! Wandering!

Have only one hope—

YOU!

They saw their parents killed . . . homes destroyed . . . family life and affection rubbed out . . . during bitter years of war and ruthless occupation. Today they are deprived of shelter and care, and search hopelessly for food.

Greece's orphans are subject to tuberculosis or malaria—which have already claimed one of every three Greeks—unless you give to provide homes, hospitalization and nourishment. The future of brave little Greece lies in her children. They must be saved!
