

Deep and Shallows

April

Coy-fringed eyes of deepest blue,
Slender curves and dimples, too,
April flutters through the years
With pearly tear-drops in her ears;
Blending with a soft caress
Just a hint of wistfulness,
Undecided, all the while,
Whether she should weep or smile;
In her laugh the promise chimes
Of lamsy-divy daisy times;
So she trips along the way,
Hand in hand with March and May.

(Dusting 'em Off)

"Josiah, it says here that in some parts of the world a man can buy a wife for five dollars."
"Wal, now, Samantha, to be puffy-frank — I'm inclined to think a good wife's wuth it."

Fate's Plaything

If you are one who reads the papers
Which dwell at length on fate's foul capers,
Then you, no doubt, already know
The tragic fate of Rusty O.

A funny little monkey-face,
He found the world a cruel place;
His own mom made his life a muddle

By not allowing him to cuddle;
Instead of nourishment and love,

She'd give her child a hateful shove;
Till hungry little Rusty O
Was, physically, very low.
The man who keeps the zoo in shape
Felt sorry for the little ape,
And took him home, where he could be
Fed on Formula Number 3.
And now, my friends, there comes the part
To touch an understanding heart...
This monk, who's grown to think he's human,
Must leave this fine place 'where he's roomin',
This happy home, so nice and hunky,
And learn again to be a monkey.
Don't you feel Rusty has been dealt
A nasty blow below the belt?

YOUR VOTE ON APRIL 15TH

will decide Highland Park's Future

FOR THE NEXT FOUR YEARS

Highland Park, like all cities and businesses, faces a trying period in the immediate future. Operation expenses are rising as a result of general economic conditions... and income is limited. Resourcefulness, vigorous thinking and an attitude that "it can be done" despite all apparent difficulties, is essential if the new Highland Park administration is to continue present operations and is to cope with both old and new problems which demand attention and action.

Fortunately for Highland Park we have a number of outstanding candidates for city commissioner... but in one particular candidate... CLAYTON F. LUNDQUIST... we have the rare combination of experience and youth, a man of mature judgment imbued with constructive thoughts of getting the job done. Successful in business he has also contributed liberally of his time to community affairs. His election will bring to the city council not only new energy, a forward attitude but also a penetrating knowledge of city affairs gained through actual participation.

CLAYTON F. LUNDQUIST'S
AIMS INCLUDE:

A sound, business like administration for Highland Park... A practical "unit at a time" solution to the age-old storm and sanitary sewer problem so that corrective action can be started at once under current city income... A solution to the acute parking facilities in the business section... An expanded traffic safety program... Demands that the state share with the city part of the substantial sales tax collected in Highland Park.

INDIVIDUAL ABILITY WITH COOPERATIVE ATTITUDE

"Clayton Lundquist has the fine gift of translating good purpose into action," the "American Insurance Digest," oldest insurance paper in the United States, states in commenting upon Mr. Lundquist's selection as a candidate for Highland Park commissioner. "He will find the best way to do things and, having discovered that, will bring value to Highland Park in its municipal affairs that will cause others to also do their very best at all times."

CLAYTON F. LUNDQUIST

Born in Chicago 39 years ago, Clayton F. Lundquist attended the Chicago Public Schools, Lake Forest College and had some additional work at Northwestern University and Y.M.C.A. College Night school. He has lived in Highland Park more than a decade and has been active in civic affairs, serving on the Ration Board, in Community Chest and Red Cross drives. His service as a member of the Highland Park Zoning Committee for the last year and a half has given him broad experience in city needs and affairs.

Mr. Lundquist's extended experience in insurance underwriting and his current position as Sales Manager for the long established Fred S. James & Co., provides him with an extensive business background which will be of great assistance in providing Highland Park with a strong city administration.
