

Barrington Horse Show Slated For August 24th

Preparations have been completed for the annual Barrington Countryside Horse Show to be held Sunday, Aug 24, in the Dorville Stables, Hawley road, Barrington.

According to Ted Williams, show committee chairman, events of this year's show will cover all age groups, with children, parents and grandparents competing for prizes awarded by the Riding Club of Barrington Hills and the Fox River Valley Hunt Association.

Awards will be made to winners in beginners, intermediate, dowager, advanced and family group competition; in events featuring junior hunters, pleasure horses, handy hunters, open hunters and stock horses, and in exhibition of Palomino and Arabian classes. Participation is limited to privately owned horses ridden by amateurs. The general public has been invited to witness the show.

New Light Interesting Stories At Library For Warm Weather

Reading, like any other form of recreation, should not be too strenuous on these lazy late summer days, so for those of you who like to spend a quiet afternoon or evening with a cool drink in one hand and a good book in the other, the Library has recently purchased a number of light, but interesting, mystery stories to help you pass your spare time with a maximum of pleasure, but a minimum of mental effort and strain.

"What Happened at Hazeewood" by Michael Innis is a mystery story orthodox and traditional in setting and plot, yet one which will hold your interest from the first page to the last: When Sir George Simey was killed, the weapon used was a blunt instrument, the time midnight, the place the dead man's study, and outside there was a carpeting of snow patterned with foot prints. Moreover, there were numerous persons who not only had an opportunity but also a motive for killing Sir George. How the police, by sifting the movements and alibis of those involved, finally hit upon the real culprit makes a mystery story that is definitely worth reading.

In writing their first mystery in which Mr. and Mrs. North play no part, Richard and Frances Lockridge have produced a rare achievement in "Think of Death"—a book that is a good romantic novel as well as a superior mystery. The detective in this story is Martin Brooks, a lawyer, who is drawn into the case when he is consulted by Freddy Upton on a business deal. Later when Upton is found dead at the bottom of a swimming pool, obviously not as the result of drowning, it becomes Brooks' problem to protect from suspicion not only himself, but also his former wife, now Upton's widow, with whom he discovers he is still in love. His quest for the murderer leads him from one place to another, but you'll have to be an awfully good sleuth yourself to catch up with the guilty person before he does.

A mystery with a decidedly different twist is John Rhode's "Death in Harley Street." The different twist is provided by the fact that Dr. Mawsley, Harley Street specialist, is found dead on the floor of his office as the result of neither accident, suicide, murder or natural causes. Moreover, to add confusion to confusion the detective, Dr. Priestley, discovers that the person who planned Dr. Mawsley's death can certainly not be proved guilty of it—in fact, he is not guilty of it. For those of you who enjoy mysteries, here is a brilliantly baffling novel which you will not be able to put down until you have read it from cover to cover.

Other mystery stories which have recently been added to the Library's collection and which you will enjoy include "The Bone Is Pointed" by A. W. Upfield, "The Shadow of Guilt" by R. Bloomfield and Earle Stanley Gardner's latest, "The Case of the Fan Dancer's Horse."

Floor nurse: What did the doctor say to that patient when he sewed him up in the operating room?

Surgery nurse: That will be enough out of you.

Open Letter

Mrs. R. B. Olson, Editor
Highland Park Press
516 Laurel Avenue
Highland Park, Illinois

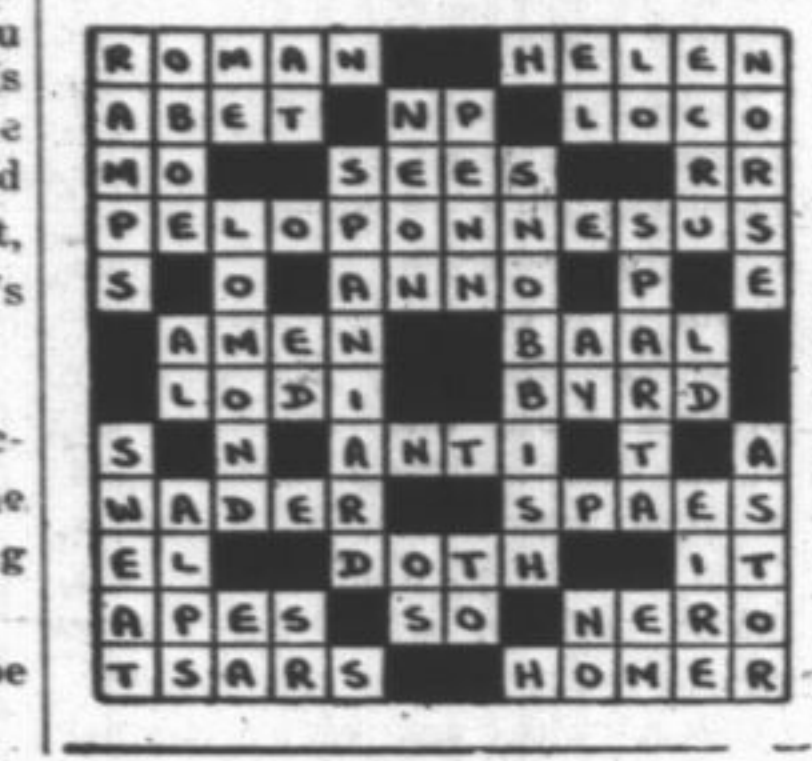

Dear Mrs. Olson:

Now that we have reached and passed our first goal in the Highland Park Building Fund Drive, I feel that I should express the warm thanks of the campaign committee for the unusually effective support you have given us in the pages of your publication.

Never in the history of Highland Park have so many worked together for a community project, and never has a larger sum for any purpose been raised. This universal reception makes us sure we shall reach our ultimate goal which is essential to make our 100-bed hospital a reality.

You have been generous with your space and time and have contributed in no small measure to what has been accomplished so far.

We are deeply appreciative.
Cordially yours,
Howell W. Murray
Chairman, Building Fund Committee

The Joke's On The Doctor

Husband: Doctor, you've got to come right away—I think my wife has appendicitis!
Doctor: Nonsense! I took out your wife's appendix three years ago and I never heard of anyone having a second appendix.

Husband: Didn't you ever hear of anyone having a second wife?
