Select Your Red Cross Service Now

As the summer season ends it's a welcome change to give at least one day a week to Red Cross.

There are thousands of volunteer jobs which the Chicago Chapter is asked to do.

Each Red Cross volunteer corps has its own standards and qualifications, but with so many services from which to choose, volunteers are certain to find just the job for them.

The Red Cross is looking for more than 100 active daytime Motor Corps drivers to transport servicemen and veterans to outdoor entertainments, swimming classes, to shuttle surgical dressings and production supplies to hospitals, and to stand by for disaster duty.

Women 21 to 50 are being asked to join the 468 Gray Ladies who devote one or two days a week to teaching handicraft, playing games, and entertaining the patients in eight military, veterans', and civilian hospitals in the Chicago area.

The Red Cross foreign service and intake departments are calling for more Home Service Corps volunteers to help trace "missing" relatives and assist with the problems which veterans, servicemen, and their families continue to bring to the Chicago Chapter.

Volunteers who qualify will be trained for the services they select in a series of classes which will be held at Red Cross Headquarters. Some begin as early as September 23; others, early in October.

Interviews are being held weekdays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Room 500, 529 South Wabash Avenue, for local women who want to demonstrate their genuine interest in humanity by volunteering for Red Cross Service. Applications also are being taken at the Evanston Branch, 615 Davis Street, and at the Oak Park-River Forest Branch, 128 South Marion Street.

Plant Peonies Now

By The Master Gardener Hardy, easy and economical to grow, the peony is one of America's favorite perennials. If it isn't already a part of your garden, be sure and include it in your fall plantings. You'll be richly rewarded in spring when the beautiful blooms add their enchantment to your home grounds.

Because by September the new eyes are formed for the following season's growth, the period between September 15 and October 15 is the best time to plant peonies. Planting during this period establishes new feeding roots right up until wintertime, making plants that show stronger growth the following spring. Peonies may be planted with satisfactory results, however, until the first hard freeze. While early plantings show a little stronger growth the following spring, there is no noticeable difference in the second growing season.

Peonies need plenty of sunlight, good drainage and prefer a rich, deep loam soil. Prepare the bed to a depth of 2 feet a week or more before actual planting time so that the soil can settle. Thorough preparation of the soil is necessary because of the deep rooting character of the peony and because the planting is a permanent one in many cases.

Since peonies, once they are established, occupy the same spot for a number of years, and since they are heavy feeders, it is important that they get regular feedings with complete plant food. Apply it at the rate of one tablespoonful per square foot on the surface of the soil surrounding the plant and work into the earth lightly with a rake.

There are a few "don'ts" to keep in mind when planting peonies. You want to avoid setting the roots too deeply in the soil. In light soil, buds may be covered by three inches of soil; in heavy soil, the covering should not exceed 2 inches. Be certain, also, that you don't plant them too closely together. Three feet is as close as they should be to one another. And, don't plant peonies near trees or shrubs, or where other peonies have previously grown.

Peony plants should get a light mulch of straw or similar material the first winter after planting. Roots have not become well established and alternate freezing and thawing is likely to do a great deal of damage. Apply the mulch after the ground is frozen.

Should you find it necessary to move established peonies, this is the best season to do the job. Unless it is absolutely necessary, however, I would recommend that you let them stay put. No peony plant which has been growing in one spot more than two years should be moved without dividing. Carefully dig up the entire plant and shake or wash off the soil to expose the roots. Rather than trying to divide at once, let it stand for a few hours, exposed to the air, till the roots wilt somewhat. Then you can cut them without breaking where you do not wish to.

A good peony division is a root not more than six or seven inches long with three to five eyes or buds at the top. Larger roots are no better; in fact, except in the South, large roots are not as good as standard three-to-five-eye divisions.

"Do you know how long one hair on your head will live? The time varies from a few months to four years. Then consider the fate of an eyelash. They only flutter 150 days apiece."

HERE'S the beginning, middle and end of a summer party—a tall, exciting, ice-cold drink. This Mocha Molasses Flip is more fun, as everything is in summer, if lingered over on porch or terrace, but good any way or any place you want to serve it. The work of a moment to put together, this new taste-treat will be the source of delicious moments whenever you drink it. This summertime thirst-quencher will hit the spot because it's based on everybody's love for coffee. It's a refreshing climax to any party, and you'll find yourself making your own party on hot afternoons by serving some Mocha Molasses Flip with no excuse but that you love it. Keep it in the refrigerator, until you feel the urge to pour it into tall glasses and top with whipped cream.

Mocha Molasses Flip: 3/4 cup cocoa, 6 tablespoons molasses, 2 1/2 cups cold, strong coffee, 2 1/2 cups milk. Combine cocoa and sugar; stir in molasses and coffee. Add milk and heat. Chill. Top with whipped cream. Yield: 6 tall glasses.

The Woman Listener

By Sally Welles

ELAINE ROST, Cincinnati's daughter and latest acquisition to NBC's "Road of Life" in the role of Isobel Daley, was actually in radio before she was "discovered". Not so long ago Elaine was hiding her time as receptionist-switchboard operator in a Cincinnati radio station, "waiting to be discovered". Which is exactly what happened! One day a locally sponsored show was in dire need of an ingenue. The suggestion was made that if the girl at the switchboard could talk so effectively on a telephone, chances were she could do the same on a mike. Whereupon she was rushed from the desk to the studio and her first dramatic spot. Result: Permanent transfer from telephone wires to network lines.

The Best Contestants on radio programs are middle-aged women, according to Tommy Bartlett, emcee of "Welcome Travelers", the new ABC show. He thinks it's because they're more relaxed than at any other age. Women, generally, are better than men, according to Tommy. And he should know, having been in radio for 18 years, much of the time as a host to radio participants of assorted ages, sizes and personalities.

Radio Actress Rosemary Rice will be heard in the role of Susan Wakefield, who is now devoting herself to unselfish life as a nurse on the popular daytime drama, "The Right to Happiness", heard each weekday over NBC.

Willard Waterman, running star of CBS' "The Guiding Light", has great faith in the sound advice of the educators of this country. At college his work with the Glee Clubs and Dramatic Club was spectacular, but he had little time for scholastic pursuits. Finally the Dean suggested that if Willard wasn't going to do anything but work in the school theatre, he might as well leave and try to earn his living as an actor. Which is exactly what he did.

Two Stars of CBS' "Big Sister". Paul McGrath and Santos Ortega, spend much of their free time in the studio reminiscing. They met back in the mid-twenties on a show called "Luck of Joan Christopher". Paul played the hero, and Santos starred as the villain. Now, in "Big Sister", their paths have crossed again, and they are enjoying the reunion.

Lowell Thomas, veteran CBS newscaster, has coined a phrase to describe college graduates who don't keep up with the news of the day. He calls them "gold-brick B.A.s". "People who close their minds together with their books when they leave school", he says, "have wasted their educations. A well-educated man or woman stays alert and informed about what's going on here and abroad."

Walter Winchell, who usually dispenses orchids, was the recipient of a real one recently. Tom Breneman, since of ABC's "Breakfast in Hollywood" who gives away an orchid daily, presented Winchell with one in recognition of the columnist's work for the Cancer Drive, as Treasurer of the Damon Runyan Memorial Fund.

Charles Irving, who plays the role of Young Dr. Malone on the show of the same name, has just bought a farm in Bucks Co., Penn. This makes the third member of the "Young Dr. Malone" cast to take up residence in that area. Barbara Weeks and Ginger Jones are neighbors.

The "Truth or Consequences" Scavenger-hunting Al Andersons, having been refused an autographed piece of sheet by Mahatma Gandhi, are going to try another tack. They have heard that Gandhi's personal physician is here studying "the American way". Therefore, they are now endeavoring to reach him, hoping that he may be more in sympathy with the stunt, and will persuade Gandhi to comply with their request. The Andersons are attempting to collect a list of ten items which Ralph Edwards sent them in search of this summer while NBC's "Truth or Consequences" is off the air.
