LOYALTY SUNDAY.

Those popular plastic toy balloons or bubbles have now served at least one useful scientific purpose. A research laboratory has found that a quarter inch piece of this plastic bubble passes every test as a "window" in an atomic ray detector.

The stern father was a trifle sarcastic. "Say, young man," he said, "it's past midnight. Do you think you can stay here with my daughter all night?" "Gosh," exclaimed the innocent young lad, "I'll have to telephone my mother first."
