FEAR

You are a slave, it's sad but true,
To every fear that you yield to.
All along your whole life's trail
It's only fear that makes you fail
In doing what you know you should
And know you can, if you but would Master self and every fear
From day to day, from year to year.
For you would then make fear
your slave,
And you would not be half the knave
That you are now, because you feel
The fear that threatens you is real.
Fear always emanates from self;
But if you put it on the shelf
And turn your thoughts to worthy things
You'll have more power than all the kings.

You've often thought, and it is true,
You're influenced by what others
do;
And yet it's true that every day
You're only moved, in any way,
In so far as you, yourself,
Put fear way back on memory's shelf.
For in this jumbled world you'll find
That strength of will and strength of mind
Are what you need to master life
With all its dreads and all its strife.
Fear is the mind's decadent state;
Fear makes you think and act too late;
Fear never serves you as a friend,
But, uncontrolled, makes doom your end.

SOCIALS—

Saturday, December 27, from 4 to 7 o'clock at the Exmoor Country club.

Miss Mason, who is home from her studies at Bard college at Annandale on the Hudson for the holidays, wore a turquoise blue bouffant dress trimmed with black lace. The same black shadow lace covered the skirt. She carried a bouquet of red carnations and white gardenias.

The debutante's mother was in dark green trimmed with gold and silver, complemented by an orchid corsage. Her grandmother wore a light grey gown with a sheer chiffon cape embroidered with crystals.

Miss Mason's assistants were the Misses Nancy Mills and Nancy Lou Parliament of Highland Park, Polly Barthell, Mary Thompson, and Jane Wellin of Winnetka, Mary Molloy of Barrington, Shirley Butler of Glencoe, Laura Dodd of Evanston, Georgette Burrows of Park Ridge and Margot Schmidt of Madison, Wisconsin. They all wore gardenia halloes in their hair.

On Friday, December 26, Miss Diane Sta'has was introduced to their friends by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Pericles P. Stathas of 11 Ravine terrace, at a tea at their home from 4 to 7 o'clock. Supper and dancing for the younger group followed.

Diane, home for the holidays from William and Mary college in Williamsburg, Virginia, where she is a sophomore, was assisted by her younger sister, Thalia, Nancy Appel, Barbara Ellis of Winnetka, Marguerite Kerber, Nancy Newman, Nicolette Sikokis, and Nancy Sproul.

Miss Sta'has wore a white silk chiffon gown of Grecian design trimmed with gold braided French lace which followed a diagonal pattern from her left shoulder, forming a streamer down the front of the skirt. The halo she wore on her head was of the same lace. She carried vanda orchids.

Mrs. Stathas wore a dusty rose dinner gown complemented by a single gardenia. The debutante's assistants wore wristlets of gardenias.
