War-Time Romance To Culminate In Wedding

Saturday, January 17, will mark the culmination of the wartime romance of Clarence Rosalini, husky Army sergeant, of Highwood, and pretty, talented Fraulein Erika Listander, who recently flew from Germany to join her fiancé.

During the war the two met in Bavaria. Prior to that time Erica had been a private secretary, traveling throughout Europe. During the war she acted as a civilian secretary and messenger for the German army.

Her Berlin home destroyed, Erika went to Munich, where she remained until the end of the war. The young bride-elect shudders at the recollection of those dark days, when, huddled in an open field, during bombings, she prayed to be spared. After the war she became a hostess in an officers' club in Munich, working with the American 3rd army quartermaster corps. She obtained the position through her knowledge of German, French and English.

Miss Listander, an attractive blonde of medium size, is athletically inclined, having placed third in long distance breast-stroke in the Olympics. She is the daughter of an artist who has done many murals in churches and other buildings. Her parents are now in the French zone in Germany, and her only brother is in a French prisoner of war camp.

Until the wedding, after which the newlyweds will live at 229 Morgan place, Highwood, the bride is staying with the John Briedens, friends of her fiancé. She declares that she finds America wonderful, and marvels at the quantity and variety of American foods.

Highland Park Public Library

The Children's Department "When you are writing for children . . . Think your best, write your best. Let the whole thing live!"

After reviewing the kaleidoscopic display of children's books today, it is difficult to realize that Children's Literature, as we consider it now, books written for children with the understanding of children, is of fairly recent date. Deeply concerned, as they were with the education of their children, our Pilgrim Fathers on the Massachusetts shores hardly met the need and longing of children's hearts when they offered them their conception of juvenile fare, the alphabet lines in the New England primer:

A.—"In Adam's fall We sinned all Z.—Zacchaeus he, Did climb the tree Our Lord to see." Between then and now came the influence of genial pimple-faced John Newbery and his famous bookshop, rare spirits like Mary and Charles Lamb and Monsieur Perrault in France and his Mother Goose, with a slowly, very slowly growing feeling that children were entitled to the best, as exemplified in the case of Rudyard Kipling and Mary Dodge, the editor of the famous St. Nicholas magazine. When Mr. Kipling asked Mrs. Dodge if he were not to be invited to contribute to St. Nicholas, the editor's provocative answer was: "Are you sure you are equal to it?"—Mr. Kipling's reply came a few weeks after when he sent her "Rikki-Tikki-Tavi" and "Tomai of the elephants", and thus began the famous Jungle Book.
