This Month in Your Service BULLETIN

SINCE THE Chicago Railroad Fair (centennial of the first steam locomotive out of Chicago) will be held from mid-July into September on Chicago's lakefront (where the World's Fair was held several years ago), we have examined a few records having to do with the railroad's infancy. Learned that had New York State listened to a gentleman from Hoboken in 1812, credit for the putting-together of tracks and steam power would have gone to the United States instead of England. Learned how Chicago and Northern Illinois' first two railroads used Chicago's first locomotive, same passenger station, and same tracks. Learned how another of our railroads was the first to benefit from the Land Grant, an experiment which greatly stimulated railroad construction in these parts. And the putting-together of our findings and John McKee's sketches has resulted in the first of our two stories on some of our railroads.
