

Deep and Shallows

Wanted

I'd like to meet the person who received a "duplicate award in the case of a tie."
 I'd like to know how a traffic cop manages to write a ticket for a motorist who has a car with no running board. (You guessed it. Mine's a '38 model).
 I'd like to have a few city friends who could visit our "little place in the country" without expecting a chicken dinner.
 I'd like to meet a saleswoman who didn't call me "Dearie".
 I'd like to find a restaurant where I could get a cup of coffee with my dinner, not half an hour later.
 I'd like to hear a man admit that there exists one woman who is a good driver.
 O, shucks. The millenium is a long way off.

It's August But Christmas Is Coming

Sol says James Kilcoyne, who has his studio in Deerfield, and who is already making photographic Christmas cards. August is the time to order cards as prices are lowest at that time, and this applies to portraits as well. In giving a photographic card, he adds, you have given a keepsake.

The Carnivorous Crocodile

It's quite a feat to stop the clock Of that great brute—the ugly croc;
 His long and mighty tail can crash And wallop with a fatal smash;
 But hunters risk such dire reverses— His skin makes such fine bags and purses.
 A tale that's filtered through the years Is that the crocodile sheds tears
 When wanton murder he'd commit, Thus making him a hypocrite;
 So when folks grieve, with phoney guile, They're rated with the crocodile . . .
 But since the croc's a sluggish brute, With brain as clumsy as his snoot,
 These tears could indicate delight At sating his vast appetite.
 Although, of course, it's not done now,
 History informs us how
 When tyrants hankered to retire
 Some luckless lug who'd roused their ire,
 They rubbed him out in fiendish style
 By tossing him into the Nile.
 When Mamma Croc decides that she
 Should raise an ugly family,
 She lumbers to the solid land,
 To lay eggs in the sun-baked sand;
 And when that little chore is done,
 It's finished by the tropic sun.
 Then mamma calls again, and smiles
 On lots of little crocodiles.

Chicago Infant Welfare Plans Benefit For Small Charges

The Infant Welfare Society of Chicago has a dream of being able to hire additional sorely needed nurses in their Chicago stations for the coming winter, or winters. In order to realize this dream it is sponsoring a modern house, now open to the adult public in all the beauty of its perfect furnishings in Skokie, Illinois, one block north of Dempster between McCormick and Crawford.
 Yellow arrows will point your way once you are in the vicinity. A friendly Infant Welfareite will greet you from her booth in front of the house. A pleasant host or hostess will show you around and answer your questions. You will leave feeling that the price of admission, twenty-five cents, has been doubly well spent in that you will have seen a beautiful and charming home and the Infant Welfare Society will be further enabled to add the beauty and health and happiness to the lives and homes of the mothers and little children whose well being is its pride.

"Annie Get Your Gun" At Shubert Theater

Over 297,000 people have witnessed Rodgers and Hammerstein's production of Irving Berlin's sensational musical, "Annie Get Your Gun" in Chicago, combining the two engagements—17 weeks on its recent visit and now in its sixth week at the Shubert Theatre.
 "Annie Get Your Gun" is a big show in every sense of the word. It is the biggest hit in New York, where it has been playing to standing room for more than two years. It is likewise the biggest hit in London, England, as well as in Australia.

In the Chicago company Billie Worth plays and sings the role of Annie Oakley, the fabulous farm girl who could neither read nor write but who became world famous as a sharpshooter, and Frank Butler, another sharpshooter, is portrayed by Earl Covert. Jack Rutherford is seen as Buffalo Bill, Donald Burr as Charlie Davenport; Jean Cleveland, Tommy Wonder, Zachary A. Charles as Sitting Bull; Bernard Hoffman, Barton Mumaw, Mimi Walters and others, counting up to 56 speaking and singing parts, not to mention its chorus of singing and dancing boys and girls. There are five scenes in the first act and four in the second, which serve as colorful background for its 22 musical numbers, enlisting upwards of a total of 100 people.

The hit tunes include "The Girl That I Marry," "Doim' What Comes Naturally," "You Can't Get a Man With a Gun," "Show Business," "They Say It's Wonderful," "Lost In His Arms," "Who Do You Love, I Hope?," "Sun In The Morning" and "Moonshine Lullaby."
 "Annie Get Your Gun" was staged by Joshua Logan, unquestionably the foremost director of the day. The sets and lighting are by Joe Mielziner, the dances by Helen Tamiris, recreated by Daniel Nagrin; the costumes by Lucinda Ballard, and the orchestra under the direction of Ray M. Kavanaugh.

Performances are given nightly, including Sunday, with matinee day on Saturday only.
