

Deep and Shallows

Saturday Morning

Saturday morning, and Thea goes
To learn to dance on her twinkling toes;
Erik with hammer and nail is bent
On building a house that he can rent.

Anna is busy washing the clothes,
Reciting her dolly's many woes,
While Daddy is walking to and fro
Loafing and letting his whiskers grow.

Mother is wondering what to cook,
Out of her head or out of the book.
So the day starts with its bustling charm,
Saturday morning down on the farm.
—Loki

On Account of Because

The Ezra Ameses had pot-pie for supper the other night.
Y'see, some varmint had been making off with Ezra's chickens, and Ezra aimed to put a stop to it. So last Thursday night, when he heard a racket in the hen house, he dove into his bed slippers, put on his overcoat over his night shirt and grabbed his gun.
He was sneakin' around, peering this way and that, gun cocked, when his no-count hound dog, Buck, slipped up behind him, and in a burst of affection, nuzzled Ezra's bare leg with his cold nose. Ezra shot thirteen hens.

No Woman's Land

On the island of Athos,
So I've heard them say,
Near the faraway country of Greece,
There's a haven of havens—
It stands to this day!
Where the male of the species finds peace.
—R.B.O.

And what, do you ask,
Is unique about this?
Why do men here find freedom from care?
And what is the source of This essence of bliss?
Why, bless you, no women live there!

Just call it an Eden
Without any Eve,
Noah's ark, just consisting of males;
The men, when they get there,
Don't clamor to leave—
That is, if you swallow these tales.

Dogs, cats and horses
Without any wives—
Their mates are forbidden to land,
Except for winged creatures,
Who live their own lives
A strange and a weird-looking band.

The styles haven't changed
Since 900 A.D.,
(If that term could apply to their gear.)
No tresses are cut,
Though they fall to the knee,—
They're secured in a knot near the ear.

No frivolous pastimes
In No Woman's Land,
No singing, no dancing, no baths,
No games and no fighting—
All such things are banned;
Otherwise, they pursue their own paths.

The capital city
Of this strange regime—
This wacky collection of huts?
They tell us it's Karyes—
Strange though it may seem,
Whose English translation is NUTS!
—R.B.O.

Elm Place Choruses Prepare Operetta

By Lucy Grey
"The Mikado", an operetta by Gilbert and Sullivan, is being prepared by the seventh and eighth grade chorus groups under the direction of Mrs. Joy, musical director, for presentation Thursday afternoon, April 21, and Friday evening, April 22, in the Jesse Lowe Smith Auditorium, Elm Place School.

The dramatization, under Miss Sprague's direction, is well under way. The construction of scenery, properties, and programs is being ably handled by Miss Hanscom's art classes, and Mr. Cockrum's manual arts shop groups. Mrs. Broming, physical education director for the girls, is taking charge of the dancing.

"The Mikado" is the story of the Mikado's son, Nanki Poo, who runs away because he has been commanded by his father to marry Katisha, an elderly woman who is in love with him. He falls in love with Yum Yum, a ward of the Lord High Executioner, Ko Ko, who is engaged to her. When Nanki Poo finds this out, he tries to kill himself, but is stopped by Ko Ko who is in need of someone to execute. Complications arise, and Ko Ko must be content with Katisha.
