Shopping Bags

There are, in my opinion, three distinct types of shopping bags—the string kind, the paper one with twine handles that cut into the palm of the hand, and the oil cloth variety. These bags are indicative of the characters of the people who carry them.

Take, for instance, the string shopping bag that Mr. X. Brown carries. In the first place, one never sees Mr. Brown carry the bag to the market, for he has it carefully folded in his coat pocket. He is a gentleman with the mien of retired leisure. Everyone in the village is aware that Mrs. Brown's small legacy from her Aunt Helen supports the family, and Mr. Brown knows that they know, but he assumes an air of aristocratic discrimination as he shops. Packages, bottles and cans are put into the string shopping bag with frank display. The neck of the catsup bottle protrudes dangerously through the mesh, and one can see that he has bought a recognized superior brand of coffee. He is proud of his shopping ability, and glad that acquaintances can note for themselves how thrifty he is and how accommodating, to do the shopping.

Now, the paper bag conceals everything. It is indeed like Miss Z. Swan, who, for years, has been an enigma to the town. She hurries to the shops with exact intention, buying a package here and another there and placing them in the paper container with secure secrecy. One has no idea what she has bought and one's curiosity is left thwarted when one sees her scurrying home with the bag side of her pulled down, like a pump-handle, with the weight of her many purchases. How can she use so many things? She lives alone and seldom has visitors. The paper shopping bag with its twine handles is a riddle. It tells nothing—nor does Miss Swan.

The oilcloth variety is the most kindly of all shopping bags. It is seldom new. In fact, it is more often old, like Mrs. Y. Mulvaney, who carries one. Its finish has peeled off in spots, leaving it as freckled as its owner's bigboned, hardworking hands. The worn sides protrude with the shapes of the packages as do her cotton stockings over her varicose veins. One may not exactly determine what she has bought, but at least the soft bag allows a hint, and one can guess at shapes. One's curiosity is whetted and entertained.

It is so that one knows Mrs. Mulvaney. With unhurried pleasure she stops her many errands to speak with a friend. Her oilcloth bag is never too heavy, for she must shop with discretion. Like her bag, she is shabby, her cloths hanging from her stooped shoulders like seldom-worn coats on a hatrack in a damp hall. But, like her bag, she is full of sweetness. There is always an extra cookie or a gum drop for a neighbor's child.

"Just have a sweet," she'll say, rummaging in the dark recesses of the shopping bag. "It'll refresh you while we talk."

When I accept a sugared candy I find the flavor of Mattie's generosity blended with the scent of the friendly oilcloth bag.

Third Annual Educational Workshop In District 107

Teachers of School District 107 will be returning this week-end to take part in the third annual educational workshop which this year will be held at the Elm Place School from August 15th through September 2nd. As in previous years, the areas for study were selected by staff members working with Dr. Dahle. The schedule of meetings and work sessions has been set up by a special committee.

Parent Participation Continued

Parents of Elm Place and Green Bay children will again participate in many of the workshop activities. Some mothers of upper-grade children will serve with teachers on the Extra-Curricular Committee which will be concerned with the development of balanced extra-curricular and out-of-school programs. Other parents will be attending and-or participating in some of the special meetings that have been scheduled. These meetings include informal conversational sessions with the special teachers, the Guidance Director, and the School Nurse. Several informational films on Child Growth and Development have been secured and scheduled especially for parents. Parents new to Highland Park or new to District 107 may be interested in attending some of the special sessions which have been planned for the new teachers. These sessions will be devoted to such topics as "Our Philosophy and Objectives of Education," "Principles of Learning and Teaching," and "An Experience Curriculum." All of the Workshop meetings are open to parents.

Opening Session

The opening session of the Workshop will be held at 9:30 Monday morning, August 15th. Following the introduction of new staff members, Mr. Franklin J. Lunding, President of the Board of Education, will give a word of welcome. At this session, detailed information about the organization of the Workshop, areas for study, committee membership, working centers, etc. will be given.

Woman's Club Announces New Dance Club, "The Highland Fling"

A new dance club for the young in heart and gay in spirit has been formed—to be known as "THE HIGHLAND FLING". This club will replace the dinner dances of the past with four supper dances throughout the winter. Music will be by the ever-popular George Burnett's orchestra.

THE HIGHLAND FLING committee anticipates an active response to its invitation to become a member, and, as the membership is limited, now is the time to send your pledge to Mrs. Charles A. Simpler, 1748 Deerfield Road, Highland Park. Tel: H. P. 6121.

Local Artist In No-Jury Society Of Artists Exhibition

Violette Rice, 320 No. Sheridan Road, Highland Park, Illinois represents the Highland Park art colony in the current exhibition of the No-Jury Society of Artists, on view in Mandel Brothers Art Exhibition Gallery. This is the seventeenth annual exhibition of the No-Jury Society of Artists. Miss Rice who is president of the society, has again distinguished herself by a large oil study entitled "Unfathomed". It is a canvas of the ocean bed showing the various inhabitants of the sea floating about in their natural color and with much agitated movement. The study is a large and worthy effort for this excellent painter.

Contest For "Roadster Princess" Closes August 20

Dodge dealers will select the "Roadster Princess" of Chicago in a contest open to all motoring beauties. Contestants can enter through neighborhood Dodge dealers. Automobile editors of the Chicago papers will judge the finalists of the contest which closes August 20.

Lake Zurich Playhouse

Next Wednesday through Sunday, August 17 to 21, the Lake Zurich Playhouse will present their annual Meller-Dramer, "The Drunkard." This production will be presented in the florid style of the 1890 period with singing and dancing between acts.
