Top-rate Highland Park Telephone Operators earn an average of . . . $56.38

Average of all Highland Park Telephone Operators is . . . $49.78

Compare it—for steady work

Actual studies in local communities show your telephone operator's wages are in line with those paid by other local companies to people of similar skills and experience.

Now, her CWA-CIO union demands more.

In considering these demands, we can't forget that your money pays telephone wages.

"The Telephone Company is a good place to work"

You've heard that often. Here's why:

The operator gets regular raises from the beginning until she reaches the top scale. Three out of four operators will get such raises this year—without asking for them, without striking for them.

She enjoys steady work.

She gets seven paid holidays a year.

She is entitled to paid vacations of two weeks with her second year of service. (Three weeks with her 15th year.)

She is protected by a liberal sickness and death benefit plan, without a penny's cost to her.

Operators and all telephone people are covered by a retirement plan which includes a $100 a month minimum pension including Social Security.

Telephone wages are ahead of living costs

Illinois Bell operators have had nine general wage increases since 1940, including three since the war. These were in addition to the regular "progression" raises. Their earnings have increased 139%, while living costs are up only 74%.

This is one big reason why we had to increase telephone rates in 1949.

In our bargaining to determine whether we should agree to any further wage increases, we are mindful that it's your money that pays the bill.
