In his vision of the coming Messiah the Prophet Isaiah foresaw an era of freedom and peace, so he called the coming Saviour The Prince of Peace. To our generation which has lived in constant war or threat of war and has seen the threat of the very extinction of freedom these words might sound like a cruel mockery. But there is a hope in this vision that we must never give up.
Jesus claimed the allegiance of all men, but he disdained the use of the sword to effect it. Mahatma Gandhi was so impressed with that ideal that the political liberation of India was realized without bloodshed. The ideal of peace has been born. The realization of it will come when mankind gives its supreme allegiance to Christ. Let us beware of the false Messiahs who promise an earthly paradise, but whose secret motive is to rule over others. And while we wait for fulfillment of the promise there is a peace of heart to the life ruled by the spirit of Christ, a peace that the world can neither give nor take away.
Rev. A. G. Masser
First United Evangelical
"Do not open until Christmas." During the past several days our hearthstones and tables have been the repositories of ever growing accumulations of beautifully wrapped and carefully marked Christmas gifts. Many of them bear this pointed request—Do not open until Christmas; a request calculated to make our Christmas surprises more real and meaningful. We like to think of the recipients of our gifts as enjoying them on Christmas Eve and on Christmas Day.
However fitting this may be for things material, it is just the opposite for things spiritual. The pleasures of Christmas with its messages of cheer, of peace and of blessing are by no means to be confined simply to this one day of the year on which we commemorate the Birth of the Prince of Peace. On the contrary, during every day of the year we are to open our hearts to the God-inspired spirit of good will; to the many obligations and opportunities for kindly, thoughtful service, and most of all, to Jesus Himself as our personal Lord and Saviour.
Rev. Hans K. Platzer
Redeemer Lutheran
Christmas customs vary. Yet, without exception yule-tide celebrations offer a refreshing release from the tedious round of day-by-day duties. Ice-bound Labrador enters a brief spell of gayety lacking our splendor. Equatorial Africa pauses amidst its steaming employment to salute the Child-Jesus. Mexico climaxes its festivities with the breaking of the pinata-jar that hangs full of gifts. Santa alters the monotony for light-housemen of New England with a loaded plane that bombards presents. Our Fighting Forces abroad will spread the wonder of the Savior's birth to children of strange lands. In every case 'peace' of a kind will touch some hearts.
We are grateful for that kind of 'peace'. Of course, we shall still go back to the chores of day-to-day routine. 'Peace' a surcease from the slaughter of war is worth working for. Nevertheless, with the silencing of the guns we shall return to the rivalries of social life and the competition in industry. 'Peace' that lifts us above the hatefulness of worldwide strife provides a favorable turn. But, naturally, we shall expect to wrestle with local class and race prejudice again. To many

Have you noticed how much chubbier certain Sophomore and Senior girls have become since last Sunday. Maybe it's because of Sys (I'm through with Lake Forest boys) and Janet Graham's tea. It's reported that the food was really lush. Sue Jacoby also had a party over the week-end, but it certainly wasn't a tea party!
Certain individuals have been turning green lately. Some biology fiends offered some choice "tidbits" composed mostly of dissected frogs to their lunch periods and to a geometry teacher. We know a number of people in 5th and 6th whose appetites quickly diminished.
If you haven't been hooked into buying a Little Giant by this time it isn't the fault of the Many Mercenary Seniors. It all started with a band playing music (?) at 8:15 in the morning accompanied by dancing senior girls, Peggy Loewenthal, Ann Ullman and others. Who said Seniors weren't crazy?
Those that thought the Turnabout was jammed got a big shock Friday night at the Community Center at the marvelous dance after the game against Oak Park. Maybe that's the reason the dance

'peace' is the change from deadly and bloody brutalities to the more refined lusts and mincing hungers of civilization.
Does the glorious Gospel of Peace present a richer and more weighty Truth? Matthew, Luke and John report a miraculous birth as proof of God's love for man. Their angels are the Almighty's ambassadors who thrill with a fear removing, joy producing message. Three star-led magi worship a homeless infant in a stable where they give of their abundance. Shepherds who hastened to the manger bring wonder to those who listen to their tale. God is praised for His peace-bringing good will toward men. The nativity Gospel becomes a written record for the most compelling of motives. God is the Friend of man. The Peace that may bless every life is His divine Comradship for this day and for Eternity. The Bethlehem-babe brings this Peace within reach of your heart and home.

For God, every day and every moment is another Christmas. It is not once a year, nor once in history, that He sends His incarnate Self into the world to lift the leaden burdens of humanity. His angels still sing in the music of human loves; His star still glimmers in the heaven of human dreams; His silent nights still linger in the meditative moments; and Christ is born in every minute that a gift of kindness proceeds from man to man. No fireside is therefore complete without its Manger—the eternal symbol of

by Mrs. M. E. Tippey
Alice Abrams, reporter for Troop 12 (6th grade, Braeside) tells of her troopmates making Christmas cookies. This is part of their work on the Cook badge, which her troop is starting, along with the Nutrician and Hostess badges. The girls went to Evanston twice, where the Public Service Company has been helping them on this trio of badges. This fall the troop started another group of badges which went well together—Cyclist, Outdoor Cook, Tree and Mammal badges. They made bike trips to Turnbull woods, built fires and cooked; and, while there, studied trees and animals. They also visited Clavey Nursery for careful study of several different varieties of trees, picking up crab apples for an on-the-spot snack. In learning about 15 Illinois mammals, each girl worked out charades for the others to guess which animal she intended to be. Work on this group of badges will be continued as the weather permits. Mrs. Elzie Partlow and Mrs. Albert Slepman are the troop's leaders.

Elsbeth Maxwell, from Troop 18 (8th grade, Lincoln) reports that her troop went tobogganing last week on Patsy Oppenheimer's hill. Afterwards, the girls went into the house for refreshments. They have spent the last few meetings making and decorating tiny Christmas trees for hospital trays. Beautiful tree ornaments are being made by the girls of Troop 37 (5th grade, Elm Place) as their gift to their parents. They have been collecting the paper tops from gallon milk bottles, painting them gold, mounting a picture cut from an old Christmas card in the center hollow, decorating the rim with tiny pearls and sequins, and fastening a gold ribbon onto it for a hanger. The girls will be bringing mittens and books to the mitten-tree at the library, and having a Christmas party afterwards. Carol Baron is their Juliette Low representative, and Elmore Levinson, their member of the Girl Planning board. Mrs. John Levinson is troop leader; with Mrs. G. H. Smith and Mrs. Edmund Taft as co-leaders.
From Immaculate Conception school, Troop 21B (5th grade) has been making bibs for St. Vincent's orphanage, and surprise Christmas gifts for their parents. Their leader, Mrs. Steve Sordyl, reports that they will also be bringing mittens to the mitten-tree.
Sharing and serving is a continuous thing for Girl Scouts throughout the year, not just at Christmas time. Christmas sharing to a Girl Scout means doing something with her time or making something with her hands to bring a little special Christmas happiness to someone else. In addition to contributing to the mitten and book tree at the library, the girls are all working hard making a large variety of things to give away.
