Molasses Orange Bars

An unusual flavor combination—molasses tang with sparkling orange—makes these bar cookies a delight to eat. They're quick to make, too.

If you like to serve snacks and desserts that are nutritious as well as taste-pleasing, plan to make the molasses orange bars pictured today. Both enriched flour and molasses are excellent sources of food iron, and in addition enriched flour contributes essential B-vitamins, protein and food energy.

A new quick-mix method for making these bar cookies enables the home baker to turn them out with a minimum of time and effort. Sift dry ingredients into a bowl, sprinkle with orange sugar, and then add remaining ingredients. Stir to blend, then beat two minutes. It's as easy as that—your cookies are ready for the pan. These "in-a-bowl" cookies make a saving on dishes, too.

A simple topping of sugar mixed with grated orange rind is spread over the cookies before baking. They may be frosted later, if desired.

Molasses orange bars are perfect dessert companions with apricots, apple sauce or other fruits. Or have them with milk, hot chocolate, or coffee.

This Must Be Reported!

SPRINGFIELD—Illinois motor vehicle drivers who figure in traffic mishaps should not neglect to file accident reports with the state Division of Highways.

Importance of complying with the law in this respect was emphasized by Charles P. Casey, director of the state Department of Public Works and Buildings. State notification is mandatory, the department chief pointed out, whenever such accidents result in death, injuries or property damage exceeding fifty dollars.

"Many Illinois drivers are still unaware of this regulation," Casey said. "Aside from the feature of law compliance, accident reporting produces definite benefits to the drivers. From a study of such statistics, we are able to determine frequently that specific road locations are the scene of high accident rates. It may then be possible to cut down future accidents by such simple means as pavement marking or sign erection.

"A second aid to drivers is the fact that the filing of an accident report sets the Safety Responsibility Law in motion. Under this statute, a driver lacking adequate insurance is required to deposit security covering possible damages or lose his license plates. This penalty usually is sufficient to effect prompt settlement of damages between motorists involved—an immediate advantage to the driver who originally reported the accident.

"On the other hand, if no accident report is filed, there can be no check on the financial responsibility of those involved," Casey said, "even though a subsequent court judgment is won, there may be no funds available to pay it."

Special forms are used in reporting accidents to the Division of Highways. These can be obtained from police at the scene of the accident, the nearest city police station, state highway police headquarters, or highway district engineering offices. Motorists who are insured will usually find that their insurance agents have a supply of report forms on hand.
