

Deep and Shallows

Bed Time Story

Prince Pucker, so the story goes, Was a lad who brought all sorts of woes To others. I must tell you that He was a most obnoxious brat.

His queenly mother, and the king, Could not deny him anything; And if he couldn't get his way He'd pucker up and cry all day.

One morning, in his princely bower, He slept beyond his rising hour, And, naturally, that night, refused To go to sleep as he was used;

And gazing up into the sky To where the full moon sailed on high He piped up with a lusty tune Of: "Wow—I want that yellow moon!"

The queen came running to his side, What had her darling been denied? And, startled by the awful din, His dad, the king came rushing in.

The moon? Why zounds! And lack-a-day! My royal son shall have his way! But all the ladders in the kingdom couldn't reach the pesky thing;

And all the archers in the land Could not shoot down one moon-beam, and The king was nutty as a loon From all that yelling for the moon.

Well, Pucker couldn't get his way, And so he howled, day after day; His cries became the faintest squeals, For he'd not sleep nor eat his meals.

The king and queen were in despair For fear they'd lose their son and heir; 'Twas plain that, if he got no stronger, Prince Pucker wouldn't last much longer.

Though doctors came and left their bills The prince refused to take their pills; He blew their powders in the air And tossed the liquids in their hair.

The king's own men were moved to hate,

The queen's fair ladies lost much weight. There seemed to be no help at all— There were no doctors left to call.

And then a new man came to town, A doctor of no great renown— But the king implored him to come hasting, For very precious time was wasting.

The doc arrived—a burly man— With crew-cut hair and ruddy pan; He looked hard at the prince, and then Roared "Spank him!" and stamped out again. The queen threw divers fits—and worse— But the frightened king got on his horse And had a jeweled shingle made, Polished to just the proper shade.

He grabbed the prince, with tragic rigor; But, with one fleeting spurt of vigor, Prince Pucker leaped into the saddle And snatched and broke the precious piddle.

Doc Spankum was called in once more, And as he entered at the door He seized Prince Pucker by the collar— (The prince was too surprised to holler.)

And with a slab of rough, hard wood, Applied it where it did most good. The crisis past, the danger gone, The prince improved from that day on.

The palace once more calm and cozy, The queen's maids became plump—and rosy; The king's men mumbled no more wrong words, But whistled like a thousand songbirds.

If you're not acting as you ought, This tale will give you food for thought.

Value Your Health More Than Riches

Some folks think that fine clothes and fine, big houses are the most important things in life, but these things really don't mean too much if a person doesn't feel well enough to enjoy them. Most folks don't realize this, but Mrs. Lucy Braswell, of Route 2, Stone Mountain, Ga., realizes it very well. Mrs. Braswell takes HADACOL, and by taking HADACOL she found she is helping her system overcome deficiencies of Vitamins B, B₁₂, Niacin and Iron, which HADACOL contains.

Here is Mrs. Braswell's own statement: "I have been sick for some time with stomach disturbances. I began taking HADACOL and I have been taking it about six weeks. I am so much better and much stronger. I will continue to take HADACOL. It sure has helped me. I tell my friends about HADACOL. I can't praise HADACOL too much. I am 59 years old."
