Compulsory Retirement

Although clever and hale when he reached sixty-five, Came dismissal, a hand-shake to bind it. Downcast, he accepted the prof-fered gold watch. . . . With no duty henceforth but to wind it.

To "Thou"

That Omar was a loafer, I'm willing to agree,— It's how he got both ends to meet Is more than I can see.

I labor hard, and every day, To earn a loaf of bread; Time 'neath a tree, tho it be free, Is not in sight ahead.

There is no way for wine to pay, A jugful or a sup; So please reveal to me the way Old Omar kept it up.

Where, in the crowd, was one dame who Wore quite a bit of this and that And 'tother, on her new spring hat. . . .

The gayest flowers that heart could wish, Plus plastic fruit—'twas quite a dish.

Did Jenny deem that, since 'twas spring,

Those fruits and flowers were quite the thing

To supplement her winter diet? It seems, at least, she vowed she'd try it.

Though hands may seem a must, to you, Prehensile trunks are useful, too. Ambling over, like a clown, Jen snatched that hat—and munch-ed it down!

Now, although shingle nails won't stop Digestion in an ostrich crop, How Jen made out, we haven't heard. . . .

Our London friends have not sent word.

And since the outcome's vague, as yet, We'd like to place a trifling bet That the plastic fruit which looked so yummy Made butterflies in Jenny's tum-my!

with her examples of her excellent collection of early pottery and textiles. Her shop is located in Milan, Ohio and throughout that state she is much in demand as a speaker. Those who heard Mrs. White when she addressed this group 2 years ago, on Blown Glass, remember her as an interesting speaker and are anxious to hear her again. She is a recognized authority on any related subjects concerning antiques and has written numerous articles on various subjects for the Antiques Journal. The Collectors' Study Group will be happy to have the Lake County Federation visitors as their guests at this meeting.

Church Fellowship Dinner To Feature Missionary Progress In Japan

Tomorrow evening, Friday, March 30, members and friends of the First United Evangelical Church will meet for a fellowship dinner at which time reports will be read concerning the work of Rev. Douglas Dawson, missionary to Japan. Rev. Dawson is supported by the First United Evangelical church and is now beginning his second year at Okayama, Japan, about half way between Kope and Hiroshima. His work there is largely among the University students of that city. The sound picture "Japan at the Crossroads" will also be shown.

A unique method of registering pledges for the coming year has been devised. A large world map with a light which travels between Highland Park and Okayama has been prepared. As each contribution is made, a fresh link will be added to the chain which will eventually join the two places. Thus the "light" is to be carried from America to Japan.

The service on Sunday evening, April 1st, will be given over to the Men's Fellowship Group, who will sponsor a missionary rally
