

that some one had been neglected, to name that person. (Hear, hear.) Or must they believe that he was a myth? Regarding salaries, the Government would not be justified in rejecting the best man because he objected to work for a salary of $2,800. The gentleman appointed would not come for less than $3,400, and the Minister of Education was justified in offering that sum.

This concluded the debate, and the motion was carried.

The House adjourned at 10:35.
