

LONDON ROOM 1.

Mackenzie
Duncan - 172

Died.

Died, at his residence, on 4th con. London Township, on 2nd inst., Major Duncan MacKenzie, in the 84th year of his age.

Death of a Middlesex Pioneer.

August 2^d 1875

Duncan MacKenzie, whose death is recorded elsewhere, was born in Strathdairn, Invernesshire, Scotland, on the 12th of August, 1787. He joined the volunteers in 1804 and remained with them till 1808. He then entered the Royal Artillery, and served in the war with France, being present at the battle of Waterloo, acting Quartermaster in charge of a depot. He was also out in the Walcheren expedition. He left the army in 1816, returned to Scotland, and married his wife, who survives him, in 1817 and came to Canada in the same year. He remained in Cornwall one year and then moved west to the London district, where he settled on the 4th concession of London Township, on the 16th of October, 1818, and where he continued to reside till the time of his death on the 2nd inst. In 1823 he was made Captain of Militia, and in 1827 was made a magistrate. For several years he was acting and Associate Commissioner of the Court of Request. He went to Chipewya in 1837, at the time of the rebellion, and as Service Officer took command of a battery of artillery. He was then ordered west by Colonel Maitland, and stationed in London. He was afterwards instructed to raise a company of artillery, which he did in 1841, and kept up entirely at his own expense for 15 years, known as the "London Independent Volunteer Artillery Company." In 1856, owing to his advanced age, he retired with the commission of Major, and since that time took little part in public affairs.

UNIQUE REUNION AT DALMAGARRY COTTAGE

Centennial Celebration Held at Hyde Park, Ontario.

A delightful and unique reunion was held at "Dalmagarry Cottage," Hyde Park, Ont., on Monday, October 14, 1918, when the direct descendants of the original owner, Major Duncan MacKenzie, J. P., gathered, with their families, from various points in Canada and the United States.

The occasion was the celebration of the close of 100 years since "Dalmagarry Cottage," otherwise known as lot 23, con. 4, London Township, became the property of Duncan MacKenzie, familiarly known as the "Old Squire."

The grant of land which he, as a British veteran after the French revolution, received from the Government at that time, included 800 acres, 700 acres of which were afterwards disposed of to incoming settlers. The deed to the remaining 100 acres bears the seal of the then reigning British sovereign, George IV. of England.

Native of Scotland.

Scotland, at an early age joined the Battalion, Royal Artillery, remaining and being in active service through the battle of Waterloo. In 1817 Mr. MacKenzie, with his wife, Margaret Barclay MacKenzie, also of Inverness-shire, arrived in Canada, and on October 16, 1818, settled on the above-mentioned property. In 1837 he received his captaincy in the militia, during which year he commanded a battery at Chip-pawa.

Later, in 1841, he organized the London Independent Volunteer Artillery, which he maintained at his own expense for fifteen years, and which in 1856 was reorganized by Col. Shanly, and became the London Field Battery. The field guns were brought from England and were the first used by the Canadian militia.

In 1856 Capt. MacKenzie retired with the rank of major.

In 1857 he was appointed a county magistrate, and for several years was an acting and associate commissioner of the court of request.

"Dalmagarry Cottage," the third house built on the homestead (the first two being log cabins), was built in 1836, and is now the property of Henry Moore Johnstone, whose wife is a grand-daughter of Major MacKenzie.

Mrs. Patterson, who lives on the homestead where she was born, with her daughter, Mrs. Johnstone, and Mrs. (Dr.) Hoare of Walkerville, are the daughters, and only remaining survivors of the large family of twelve children born to Duncan and Margaret MacKenzie.

MOORE—On the 1st April, at his residence, 45 Elmwood avenue east, William Moore, late of the Inland Revenue Department, in his 82nd year. Funeral Thursday, at 3 o'clock; services at 2.30. 1901

The remains of the late Lt.-Col. Moore were interred at Woodland Cemetery yesterday afternoon. The ceremonies were of a very quiet description. Ven. Archdeacon Davis was the officiating clergyman. St. John's Lodge, No. 209a, A., F. & A. M., contributed a magnificent floral square and cross, deceased having been the oldest member and Past Master of the lodge, which he joined in 1846. He was Worshipful Master in 1851, and had thus lived to celebrate in good standing his jubilee as a Past Master of Masonry—a distinction which rarely falls to the lot of the average mortal.

Died.

On Sept. 3th, Walter McClary, only child of Louisa M. and John M. Moore, aged nine months.

Funeral from 388 Dundas street, at 10 a.m., Tuesday.

At Thorndale, on the 8th inst., Mary Ann,

July OFF FOR CHICAGO 1881

This evening, by the 6 p. m. express, London loses three of her most promising young men, who leave for Chicago. While we all regret their departure, we join in wishing them large success in the great metropolis of the West. Their names are Mr. Charles Reid, son of Mr. Robert Reid, Collector of Customs, who has for the last five years occupied an important position in the wholesale dry goods house of J. B. Laing & Co.; Mr. W. D. Moore, son of Mr. Wm. Moore, of the Inland Revenue, who has for the last four or five years been book-keeper in A. M. Smith's New York Store; and Mr. W. A. McIntosh, son of Mr. Alex. McIntosh, of the firm of A. & J. G. McIntosh, dry goods, Dundas street, who has been in the employ of that firm for the last four years. These three young gentlemen have filled their respective positions with honor to themselves and credit to their employers, and they bear with them the best wishes of the whole community. Mr. Reid will occupy in Chicago a position as assistant in the Commissariat Department. Mr. Moore, on arrival in Chicago, will occupy an important position in the Pullman Company's office. Mr. McIntosh will resume his old business by taking a position in Messrs. Carson, Pierre, Scott & Co.'s large wholesale house. Mr. Moore was presented with a beautiful ring by Company No. 3, 7th Fusiliers, of which he was Secretary. Mr. Reid was Sergeant, and Mr. McIntosh also belonged to the same company. These three young gentlemen (all excellent specimens of what London can produce) were suppered by their friends last night at the St. Nicholas. Mr. J. C. Robinson, as usual, distinguished himself by a most elaborate spread, the tables being furnished with all the delicacies of the season. The chair was occupied in a very able manner by Lieut. Joseph Starr, of No. 3 Company, 7th Fusiliers. After loyalty and patriotism were done ample justice to the three guests were toasted in most appropriate terms, and they responded in a feeling manner. The gathering all through was one of the pleasantest of the season, and was characterized throughout by the gentlemanly deportment of all present, the apropos speeches and the really excellent songs. The three departing Londoners in their new sphere of action can always look back with pleasure to the rare and good old times they enjoyed with the friends of their youth and their dear companions in arms on the last night of their stay in London. It is quite evident from what the people of London know of the three gentlemen in question, that no matter where they go they will prove a credit to the city of their nativity and the magnificent battalion of which they were members—the 7th Fusiliers, the crack corps of Western Ontario.

JOHN M. MOORE, EX-MAYOR, DIES

Lifelong Resident of City Succumbs In 73rd Year

ILL FOR PAST TWO YEARS

Was Mayor of London In 1926 and 1927

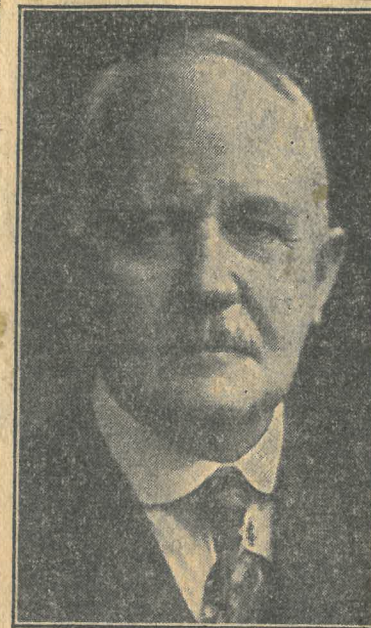

In the death yesterday afternoon of John M. Moore, at his residence, 1011 Wellington street, mayor of London in 1926 and 1927, all his life a loyal citizen of this his native city, the community lost one of her most outstanding, most beloved and most valuable citizens.

Mr. Moore, who for two years had been ailing, suffering from a chronic condition, died in the presence of the immediate members of his family.

Descended from Irish-Scottish stock, the first by his father, the second through his mother's people, Mr. Moore was typically British in his attitude toward the affairs of the city, the province and the Dominion as a whole. He prided himself in his descent as much as on his membership in the great family of Canadians and as a Londoner.

HAD MANY FRIENDS.

Known to the general public in two phases, first in the capacity of engineer and superintendent of the waterworks of London, and later, a few years ago, as mayor, Mr. Moore won friends and respect by his unassuming personality, his scrupulously honorable business methods and his sympathy with every worthy appeal and every genuine endeavor to improve conditions in his own city.

As controller for the city in 1916-1917, he displayed a wide and intimate knowledge of the affairs of London, and later as mayor, in 1926-1927, this, together with his experience as waterworks superintendent, gave him a shrewd insight into the ways in which it was best to conduct the business at the city hall.

With every member of the city hall staff he was personally popular and greatly respected. He had the reputation in the two years of his administration of knowing exactly when to leave an official alone to do his work. He knew what was to be done and he never interfered unless he saw for himself that some other way of carrying out a project was a more efficient one.

He was at all times, when mayor, easily accessible to every caller at the city hall, keeping a sort of open hall. Though keenly observing every item of work carried out under his regime, he was every eager and willing to reminisce, and often when some old-timer visited him in the city hall—and the mayor's office in those days was not as up-to-date as the present one—he enjoyed a chat about old times, more especially if his caller was a Devonshire man, halled from Ireland or had known his parents in Hyde Park.

To reporters of London newspapers he was extremely cordial, reserving a special warmth for their reception. He trusted them with a great deal of information on all sorts of things, happening and about to happen, relying on their sense of honor to keep these confidences until the time was ripe for them to become public property. This policy he carried out during his two years' term without any regrets, and he stated at the conclusion of his term that he had never had any of his "noon-hour" confidences betrayed by a reporter in London.

THE SURVIVORS.

The ex-mayor was married to Louisa M. McClary, daughter of the late Oliver and Martha (Coombs) McClary, of London. Mrs. Moore survives him with three children—Oliver Roy Moore, architect and his father's business partner; John McClary Moore, formerly a director of the McClary Manufacturing Company, of this city, and at present vice-president of London Investments, Limited, and one daughter, Elva Louise, wife of W. H. Smyth, secretary-treasurer of the same company.

Two brothers and three sisters also survive—J. P. Moore, K.C., M.L.A., of this city; Robert G. Moore, Vancouver, and the Misses Katharine, Mary and Jennie Moore, of this city.

In religion an Anglican, Mr. Moore was a member of St. Paul's Cathedral congregation. He was a Mason and a member of the Tuscan Lodge, No. 195.

The Province of Ontario, and more especially the City of London, has many monuments to the professional skill and civic interest of John M. Moore. Among these are the magnificent London Life building, the Hotel London, the dignified buildings of the University of Western Ontario and the new Bell Telephone Company building on Dundas street.

Mr. Moore was born in London on October 1, 1857. His parents were William and Margaret (MacKenzie) Moore, the father a native of County Sligo, Ireland, whose parents migrated to Canada when he was a boy. His mother was born near Hyde Park, London Township, where her father was the first clerk of the district of London.

The late Mr. Moore was educated in the public and high schools of London and under private tutors. He studied the profession of architecture, engineering and surveying in the offices of Robinson & Tracy. Mr. Moore served six years with them and completed the apprenticeship, thereafter he continued in the offices of his preceptors for several years and finally formed co-partnership with George Durand, under the name of Durand & Moore which continued for several years. His next partnership was with the late Frederick Henry. After a term of years the partnership was dissolved and since that time Mr. Moore had carried on business independently.

Mr. Moore served as engineer and superintendent of the waterworks of London for 17 years. He was city controller for the year 1916-17 and also served as mayor for two terms. He also served as a captain of "C" Company, 7th Fusiliers, for seven years and was on the reserve list of officers on the Canadian militia. He was chairman of the London branch of the soldiers' aid commission between 1918-20.

He was a member of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada, the Ontario Association of Architects, the Engineering Institute of Canada and several other professional societies. He was a member of the Highland Golf Club, the London and Brunswick clubs. The funeral services will be conducted at 2.30 to-morrow afternoon at St. Paul's Cathedral.

City Clerk Samuel S. Baker, commenting upon the death of John M. Moore, former mayor of London, said: "Mr. Moore was one of the most efficient mayors that the City of London ever had. He was one who had the complete good will of the entire staff of the civic offices. I don't know of anyone who won better service from the employees of the city than Mr. Moore, because of his knowledge of the work and his readiness to understand everything that was going on. He had the happy faculty of demanding the very best from the staff, for they were anxious to please him, simply because he was what he was to them."

In addition to his contributions to the advancement of the municipal interests of London, Mr. Moore was prominent in the work of the University of Western Ontario. President W. Sherwood Fox yesterday expressed his sincere sympathy at the death of the man whom he said had been a faithful member of the board of governors for many years, having been appointed to that body by the City of London. Dr. Fox said: "He was a much loved man in university circles, where he displayed a great deal of vision. His practical experience, which he gave freely to the institution, contributed much to the growth and development of the college, of whose buildings he was architect and engineer."

FINAL TRIBUTE TO FORMER MAYOR

Funeral Service For John M.
Moore At St. Paul's Cathedral

CIVIC OFFICIALS ATTEND

Large Congregation Shows the Esteem In Which Deceased
Was Held

A final tribute was paid on Saturday afternoon to one of London's most highly valued citizens, a former mayor, and one who was prominent in many phases of public life, John M. Moore.

Mr. Moore, who for two years has been ailing, suffering from a chronic condition, died Thursday afternoon at his home, 1011 Wellington street. A public funeral service was held at 2.30 o'clock in St. Paul's Cathedral and the cathedral was filled to the doors with friends. There were many who had in mind the years of faithful service which he had given to the city, and there were others who remembered him simply for his kindly personality, but all were desirous of taking the last opportunity of showing their respect for one of London's most outstanding citizens. The floral gifts, banked high over the casket, were in themselves ample testimony of the wide respect with which he was held.

CIVIC OFFICES.

Civic officials attended the service. The City Council was in the cathedral, together with the heads of the departments of the city hall, among whom Mr. Moore was exceedingly popular.

There was a short private service held at the home, 1011 Wellington street, conducted by Rev. M. B. Johnson, and at 2.30 o'clock the public service in St. Paul's Cathedral was conducted by Archbishop David Williams, Dean L. N. Tucker and Rev. M. B. Johnson.

The pallbearers were: Honorary—Mayor W. J. Kilpatrick, T. G. Meredith, K. C., J. M. Dillon, Dr. Sherwood Fox, A. T. Little and J. S. Moore; active—A. R. Cairncross, Oliver Ellwood, Frank Adams, R. E. Davis, A. C. Spencer and J. B. Orr.

Interment was in Woodland Cemetery. The service at the grave was conducted by Dean Tucker.

FLAGS AT HALF MAST IN MEMORY OF EX-MAYOR

All city schools are flying flags at half mast to-day to mark the passing of the late John M. Moore, former mayor of the city. This number includes 18 public schools, the three collegiates and the Technical and Commercial High School. Various business institutions also have their flags at half mast in memory of the man who was popular and respected in all circles in the city.

Early to-day heads of departments in the city hall and members of the Council, the Public Utilities Commission and the Board of Education received requests from His Worship Mayor Kilpatrick to meet at the city hall at 2 o'clock in order that they might attend the funeral this afternoon in a body.

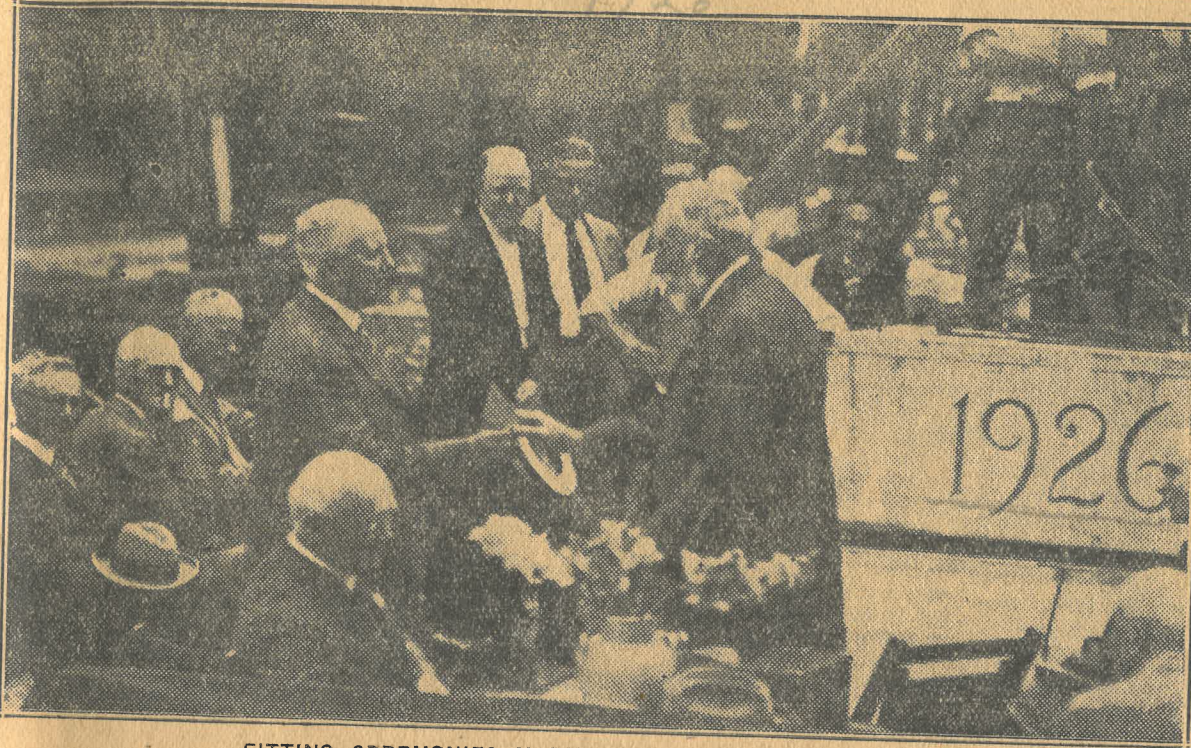

All workers at the city hall received requests from his worship to attend the services at the cathedral, and as the late Mr. Moore was one of the most popular mayors the city ever had, the members of the staff indicated that they will all attend to pay their final respects.

London Loses a Fine Citizen

London had no finer citizen than the late John M. Moore, who died yesterday after a lengthy illness. Quiet, retiring, shunning publicity, without ostentation, he was respected by all sections of the community for his sound judgment, his absolute integrity and his public spirit. No man disliked office and the public limelight more than Mr. Moore, and it was only because of what he felt was a real call to duty that he entered the municipal field. He was a member of the old Board of Control, and for two years he was mayor of the city, a position he took at great personal sacrifice. London never had a more efficient and painstaking mayor. He was particularly qualified, as he was familiar with the city's problems through the fact that for 17 years he was city engineer and superintendent of the waterworks department.

The late ex-mayor was one of the outstanding engineers and architects of the province, and London contains a number of fine buildings which will remain as a monument to his ability, particularly the London Life Building, the Hotel London, the Bell Telephone Company office and the buildings of the University of Western Ontario. He took particular pride in the university structure and in the development of the institution and since his retirement as mayor had been on the board of governors. A native-born Londoner, he was proud of his city, and was always ready to support every movement for its improvement and betterment. His death is a real loss to London.

Corner-Stone of New Building Well and Truly Laid

FITTING CEREMONIES MARK IMPRESSIVE OCCASION.

The above picture illustrates a scene enacted yesterday at the laying of the corner-stone of the new million-dollar building of the London Life Insurance Company at Dufferin avenue and Wellington streets. Mayor John M. Moore, architect of the building, is shown handing a silver trowel to Dr. A. O. Jeffery, president of the company, who laid the stone in the presence of a big gathering of prominent citizens. E. E. Reid, general manager, presided and read the president's address.

1914 June Weddings

MOORE-TAYLOR

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Taylor, Peoria, Ill., was the scene of a pretty June wedding on Thursday afternoon, June 18, when their daughter, Miss Shirley B. Taylor, became the bride of Mr. Oliver Roy Moore, of London.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in ivory faille silk, trimmed with rare old lace, a family heirloom and gift of the bride's grandmother. The veil was of princess lace falling to the hem of the train, and caught up with orange blossoms. The bridal bouquet was a shower of orchids and lilies of the valley, and the bride wore a pearl cross, her mother's gift, and a diamond bracelet, the gift of the groom.

The bride was attended by Miss Louise Moore, sister of the groom, as maid of honor. She wore a gown of cream lace with draperies of Nile green taffeta, and carried an arm bouquet of bridal roses with streamers of tulle. The groom was assisted by Mr. William Duffield, of London. Miss Anna Sullivan played the Lohengrin bridal march, and Miss Olive Mellows sang "I Love You Truly" and "At Dawning." The ceremony took place before an altar of greenery and white roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, and Mr. and Mrs. John M. Moore of this city, receiving the guests. The bridal couple left Thursday evening for a wedding trip to Denver and Colorado Springs, the bride travelling in a Roman striped and black taffeta silk, with Panama hat. They will reside at "Ore Lore Villa," St. James street, the gift of the groom's parents.

Moore-Taylor.

One of the prettiest of June weddings took place on Thursday afternoon, June 18, in Peoria, Ill., when Miss Shirley Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Taylor, was united in marriage to Oliver Roy Moore, this city.

Green and white marked the colors used in the spacious rooms of the apartment with bridal roses and masses of palms and ferns. At one end of the large living room was a beautiful altar of green with many white roses to contrast with the darker color.

At either side of the altar stood baskets of white roses tied with large, fluffy tulle bows. Smilax was used in profusion throughout the rooms, forming artistic draperies over doors and windows and twining around the chandeliers. The bride's table was beautifully decorated with a huge basket of the white roses and tied with the large tulle bow. Crystal candlesticks shaded by green silk shades, afforded a pretty setting in the dining-room.

Miss Anna Sullivan played the Lohengrin bridal march which announced the wedding party led by the groom and best man, William Duffield, of this city. Next following came the maid of honor, Miss Louise Moore, sister of the groom. She was very beautiful in a gown of cream lace with draperies of Nile green taffeta. She carried an arm bouquet of bride's roses from which pended streamers of white tulle.

Then entered the bride on the arm of her father. Her charm and loveliness was never more apparent than when she took her place beside the groom. Her bridal gown was fashioned of ivory faille silk, trimmed with rare old family lace, gift of the grandmother of the bride. The veil of princess lace was caught in a very becoming cap effect, with orange blossoms, and fell in soft folds to the hem of the long train which was trimmed with pearls.

She carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley and wore a pearl cross, a gift from her mother, and a diamond bracelet, gift of the groom.

Preceding the entrance of the bridal party, Miss Olive Mellows sang "I Love You Truly," and before the ceremony, "At Dawning."

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Taylor and Mr. and Mrs. John M. Moore, of this city, received the guests.

Mrs. Taylor was gowned in a lovely crepe meteor trimmed in rose point lace. Mrs. Moore was lovely in black and white lace over white silk.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Moore left at 7 o'clock for Denver and Colorado Springs for several weeks.

Her going-away gown was a Roman striped silk and black taffeta and a panama hat trimmed with a French spray of green.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore on their return to London will reside at their beautiful little home "Ore Lor Villa," St. James street, the gift of the groom's parents.

ELLEN PELHAM.

Now Air Mail Pilots

The pilots of the London-to-London plane, who arrived back in the city late yesterday afternoon, are here shown being sworn in by Mayor John M. Moore as special mail carriers. They will carry a packet of letters on their flight from this city to London, England, and all that remains now is suitable weather to start them on their Transatlantic trip. This picture, taken at the air field, shows, from left to right, Capt. Terry Tully, pilot, Mayor John M. Moore and Lieut. Jimmy Medcalf, navigator. In the background is Ald. Kippen.
