

Here is VULCAN as she looked when she was lying sunk at Hancock, Michigan, as a consequence of her 1918 grounding on Point Abbaye.

Below:

It is the spring of 1920 and workers at the Collingwood shipyard are fitting new hatch-covers on the newly rebuilt VINMOUNT.

In the late autumn of 1928, VINMOUNT, SHERBROOKE, OXFORD and KINMOUNT are moored at Toronto Elevators with winter storage cargoes of grain.
