

An interesting view of SEVONA, taken from a passing ship, perhaps on the St. Clair River, is from the collection of Ralph Roberts.

(Above) This Young photo at the Soo is the only operating view we have of SEVONA after her 1905 lengthening.

The heavily damaged stern section gives mute evidence to the force of the storm that wrecked SEVONA near Sand Island on Sept. 2, 1905.