

This Young photo, taken at the Soo very early in her career (note the unblemished paint), shows SAMUEL F. B. MORSE when she had two stacks.

Taken about the time of World War One, a Pasha photo caught the MORSE upbound on the St. Clair River, probably with a cargo of coal.
