Sweet sounds of the season

A number of musical performances were held over the holidays in support of local not-for-profits and community initiatives. Knox Presbyterian Church hosted the Scott Woods Band, which put on an Old Time Christmas concert at the Main Street East church. The concert featured fiddle sensation Scott Woods (left) and step-dancer 13-year-old Leo Stock (above left), who demonstrated his fancy footwork to the music of Woods and his sister Kendra (Woods) Norris on accordion. The performance was part of the band's cross-country tour, which saw a portion of proceeds going to churches, charities and community service organizations. Clockwise from above right, Noise Pollution — including (from left) Tyler Currie, Cruz Sarich, Jack Pierepoint, Carter Haydar (drums) and Palmer Grice — perform during Jammin' for Joy at Champs Family Entertainment Centre, where Sarich, lead vocalist, belts out a tune. The event, in support of the United Way, was put on by Gavin McLeod and House of Chords. Inset, event organizers Lori-Ann McLeod and Eddie Fiore show some of the toys collected for the United Way's Halton and Hamilton chapter. Graham Paine / Metroland
