Five steps to a clutter-free garage

Sporting equipment, gardening tools, holiday decorations and spare sets of tires are just a few things commonly stored in the garage. This wide variety of items of all shapes and sizes can often lead to a cluttered space. Here are five tips to help you keep a neat, functional garage.

1. Sort: Start by getting rid of everything you no longer use. Donate or sell items that are in good condition, and contact a local recycling facility to find out which materials are salvageable and what to do with them. Consider whether each item really has its place in the garage, or if it would be better off in the garden shed, the basement or elsewhere in the house.

2. Divide: Create well-defined storage zones. Keep bicycles and sports gear on one side and tools on the other, and make sure frequently used items are within easy reach.

3. Maximize height: Take advantage of the ceiling to hang items that are bulky but light, such as ladders and bicycles. You can create even more storage by installing shelves a few feet below the ceiling, to house your snow tires, for example.

4. Use the walls: Wall-mounted hooks and shelves are excellent space-savers, but nothing beats pegboard, a tried-and-true staple of well-organized garages. These handy perforated panels are perfect for hanging all sorts of items, including gardening tools such as shears and trowels.

5. Invest in containers: Large plastic storage bins are great for keeping all kinds of unsightly items neatly tucked out of view. Make sure to properly label them for quick and easy access. (NPT)
