OAKVILLE - Survivors of human trafficking in Halton are getting help from the federal and provincial governments after funding to provide housing support was recently announced.

Oakville-based Sexual Assault and Violence Intervention Services (SAVIS) of Halton will receive $413,910 toward its project Halton Collaborative Against Human Trafficking, which aims to deliver rent assistance for survivors. The official announcement was made on Jan. 19.

The more than $400,000 funding will also complement a $990,669 grant from Ontario's Anti-Human Trafficking Community Supports Fund, which will go toward SAVIS emergency and crisis response supports and long-term mobile outreach.

"We have heard from our partners on the front lines of this issue that human trafficking can happen in any community, and that many survivors struggle to move forward. Helping survivors in Oakville access housing can help them stay free of their trafficker and start a new life," said Oakville

MPP Kevin Flynn.

The funding announcement is part of the more than $7 million being provided by the federal government and the province to help survivors of human trafficking in Ontario through new transitional housing and rent assistance.

"Through this investment, our government is providing assistance to those who need it most here in Oakville and in all corners of the country," said Oakville MP John Oliver. "Projects like the Halton Collaboration Against Human Trafficking will provide more than just safe and affordable places to live, they are key to a better life for the residents who will call them home."

Ontario's Strategy to End Human Trafficking is part of the provincial government's aim to ensure everyone can live in safety and free from the threat, fear or experience of exploitation and violence, according to a media release. The strategy includes an investment of up to $72 million to increase awareness and co-ordination, enhance justice-sector initiatives and improve survivors' access to services.
