

Friend sets up GoFundMe page to help young family

sought medical advice; finally three months after various X-rays and ultrasounds, her oncologist did a bone scan, CT and MRI of her brain.
That's when they were told she had two tiny spots on her brain.
"It was in my skull by that time and in my left lung," she said.
They treated the lump with five doses of radiation, and the brain spots with stereotactic radiation.

Then they waited.
They remained hopeful that Webley would qualify for a new immunotherapy treatment for her cancer.
But after a month, an MRI located five new spots in her brain, eliminating her as a candidate for the potentially life-saving treatment that she was counting on.
By last October, the cancer had spread again. This time it was in her ovaries. It's about that time that her legs stopped working; they felt like pins and needles, not like legs that are supposed to work.

She ended up back in hospital at St. Michael's where oncologists told her the cancer had spread to her kidney, adrenals and spleen.
Now, they're trying a new intravenous medication that she has administered in hospital.

Days are long, and Webley said she doesn't have much appetite.
She gets tired of looking at the tan walls of her living room, but the family photos and little hand-drawn notes of encouragement for mommy that are taped to her bedside wall give her some peace.
"The kids are coping better," she said. "Spring is in the air, and we are hoping for a miraculous cure."

She said friends have been wonderful, dropping off food and meals so they don't have to think about what to prep most of the time.
Just eight years ago, Webley was part of a group of 12 Milton moms who met weekly with their newborn babies, sharing laughs and tears, and enjoying the chance to talk about their growing babies.
Lisa Banisch is one of those moms. She's heartbroken to see what her friend is going through and wanted to do something to help.

She started a GoFundMe page (goo.gl/cb8SmP) page for her friend to help meet the financial struggle the Milton family faces with no one able to work.
So far, $3,170 of its $5,000 goal has been raised. Community donations would be most appreciated, she said.
