Chris Hadfield will be among the latest inductees to Canada's Walk of Fame in Toronto December 1.

RETIRED MILTON ASTRONAUT CHRIS HADFIELD TO JOIN CANADA'S WALK OF FAME

His space travels may be over, but the accolades continue for Chris Hadfield.

Last week, the retired astronaut — and native Miltonian — was named among the latest inductees for Canada's Walk of Fame.

He'll join the likes of movie star Seth Rogen, Olympic ice dancers Tessa Virtue and Scott Moir and iconic singer Leonard Cohen (posthumously) in being honoured at the Dec. 1 ceremony in Toronto.

"What an honour — many thanks!" said Hadfield on Twitter (@Cmdr_Hadfield), where he has roughly 2.4 million followers. "I'm greatly looking forward to the event with the other inductees — good, fun, talented people!"

Hadfield has enjoyed a storied career that includes two spacewalks and a two-month command at the International Space Station.

There he enjoyed his biggest claim to fame, captivating the world with thousands of spectacular photos of Earth and becoming a social media phenomenon in the process.

Hadfield's descriptive tweets of the breathtaking scenery and the wonders of space drew admirers the world over — including Star Trek's James T. Kirk (William Shatner).

He's written multiple books about his experiences in space and is both an Order of Canada and Diamond Jubilee Medal recipient.
