COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT MADE EASIER WITH LET'S TALK MILTON

Providing input on important projects happening in the community is now easier with the launch of Let's Talk Milton.

The dedicated digital platform is aimed at increasing online opportunities for busy residents to participate in the decision-making process and provide feedback on local initiatives that will have an impact on the future of the community.

"Better engagement leads to better, more sustainable decision-making," said Mayor Gord Krantz.
"We are always striving for innovative ways to help the community become more involved. This online platform is another way for Miltonians to have their say."

Based on feedback from more than 700 residents and business owners collected through Milton's recent Community Engagement Survey, 73 per cent of residents indicated that they would use an online platform and had a strong desire for opportunities to participate in digital engagement activities.

Let's Talk Milton has been created specifically to meet this need within the community, and to keep residents informed and engaged while on-the-go. The interactive platform will provide a place to access the latest updates about ongoing local projects and public meetings, provide staff with insights that will have an impact on decision-making and create opportunities for residents to interact with each other.

-"What we heard from our recent survey was a desire for engagement activities to be informative, educational, transparent and accessible," said Jodie Sales, director of corporate communications and government relations. "Let's Talk Milton will provide opportunities for the community and the Town to engage with each other along their daily paths."

The platform can be accessed directly through the myMILTON mobile app or online at www.milton.ca/letstalk. The first 500 people to register for the new platform will be entered for a chance to win a Google

Home.
