Juan Carlos Vega, 51, and his stepson, Mike Chmielewski, 26, saved a man from drowning at Fifty Point Conservation Area.

ADRENALINE JUST KICKED IN, SAYS VEGA

nally grab his hand and I'm pulling him out."

But Vega, who said he's a smoker and out of shape, wasn't sure he could get the man to shore.

Luckily, his Muay Thai fighter stepson was on his way.

Chmielewski reached the victim, who was semi-conscious and making gurgling noises, wrapped the man's arms around his neck and swam him to shore.

Chmielewski had just one thought on his mind: "Am I going to get back in time before this guy dies?"

A few minutes later, everyone was on shore — safe.

Chmielewski said the man's family thanked him, calling him he "a messenger sent from God."

A woman performed CPR as the man regained consciousness. Paramedics later transported him to hospital.

Vega and Chmielewski gave their contact information to the man's family but have not heard from them. He hopes the man is feeling better and makes a full recovery.

As for Patel, he called the experience a wake-up call — an extra motivator to sign his young children up for swimming lessons and, in the future, life-guarding courses.

"In this scenario, I wasn't able to help but, let's say, if (my daughter) has proper training, maybe in the future she can save someone's life," he said.
