After the accounts of Mrs. Wittrock's husband had been liquidated, the Jady herself, we are led to believe, left Morpeth, and although she was brought up and married at or in the vici ity o' Toro to, her maiden name being Grubb or something of that sort, it is said she, with her two children, went at once to the State of New York, without so much as visiting her friends and relatives at Toronto, and that she is now, and for some time past has been, residing in the city of Buffalo, and that her husband who was supposed to have been buried o . Talbot-street, in the pleasant burial ground connected with the Church of England near Morpeth, was recently seen in the city of New York, and that he is now to be seen in "propria persona" in the streets of Buffalo city. It is further reported, with what truth at this moment we cannot say, that some to weeks or more ago, the Insurance Company that issued Mr Wittrock's policy, sent agents to Morpeth and exhumed the coffi , and have removed it to where few folks know it is, and that when it was taken up it was found to be filled with cordwood and stones. Mr. Wittrock was a Dane by birth, and a lawyer by
