Five o'Clock in the Morning.

Poetrn.

[If any of our roaders ever had the privilege of hearing Parepa sing "Five o'clock in cashier, becoming interested. the morning," they will be glad to obtain a copy of the words.] The dew lay glittering on the grass,

At the earliest beam of the sun, The swallow her nest forsook, The snowy bloom of the hawthorne tree Lay thickly the ground adorning, The birds were singing in every bush At five o'clock in the morning.

A mist lay on the brook;

And play'd with her nut-brown hair; But oft she turned and looked around, Since I have come to look I haven't got As if the silence scorning; a five-here's a ten; we'll make it all Twas time for the mower to whet his scythe At five o'clock in the morning.

And over the meadows the mowers came, And merry their voices rang; And one among them wended his way To where the milk maid sang; And as he lingered by her side, Despite his comrades' warning, The old. old story was told again, At five o'clock in the morning:
