Guests that in youth we cherished Shall come to us once more, And we shall hold communions As in the days before. They may be dark and sombre, They may be bright and fair, But the heart will have its chamber, The guests will gather there.

How shall it be, my mister, Who shall be our heart's guests? How shall it be, my brothers, When life's shadow on us rests? Shall we not, 'mid the silence, Hear voices sweet and low, Speak the old familiar language, The words of long ago?

Ehall we not see dear faces, Sweet smiling as of old, Till the mist of that lone chamber. Are sunset clouds of gold? When age has cast its shodows O'er life's declining way, And evening twilight gathers Round our retiring day.
