How many a cloud of care His bounty will dispel; How many a heart oppressed with fear, With gratitude shall swell. When angry storms shall beat Upon the poor man's cot,
With joy the chorus he'll repeat—
"God's goodness faileth not." At S. F. McKinnon & Co's. God of the harvest praise, His goodness loud proclaim; Let every heart unite to raise Thanksgiving to His name.

THE SILENT RIVER. On the dreary shore of the river Death, I have struggled for life, and gasped for breath; For its waters, so cold, were dark and deep, And I felt a chill o'er my spirit creep, As I waited there, on that dismal shore, For the boatman to come and bear me o'er. A shadow had fallen athwart my way As I danced in the light of Life's sweet day, And I felt a presence I could not see, But it made me pause in my reckless glee; And my heart was filled with a dull, deep pain, As I wandered away from Health's bright and neared the brink of the "silent river," Whose waters flow cold and silent forever; And I heard the dip of the boatman's oar, As they ferried souls to the other shore; And I caught a glimpse of a dim white

Of the wavings of an angel crowd Who were waiting there on the other side, For friends who were coming across the tide; And I heard, as I'll hear but once again, A wonderful, thrilling, heavenly strain, From the golden harps of the angel band-A chant they had learned in the Beautiful

Distant, yet sweet, on my spirit fell, Like the holy calm of a magic spell. Then the air grew black as the darkest night, And the spray dashed up and blinded my

The dark billows rolled on in angry strife, And I could not go: Oh, I prayed for life! The waters are cold, and no friend is there, They are all, all here, thank God, for his care 'Mong the angel forms that gleamed on my

Not a moment before, in garments of light-Not one 'mid that band for my freed soul To tenderly bear to the golden gates. I entreated for life with faltering breath—

The prayer was heard. As I left the shore, I distantly heard the dip of the oar: So slowly, but gladly, I wander back, Gathering sweet blossoms along Life's track, Happier than ever, when I shall gain The magical flowers of Health's bright plain.

Josh Billings on the Pollywogg.

The pollywogg iz created by the sides ov the road out ov thick water, and spends his infancy in pollywogging. After he has got through pollywogging he makes up his mind that this world wasn't made for pollywoggs and 'nothing yenture nothing have,' and then he turns his attenshun to bigger things. He looks out upon life with the eye ov wisdum, and studdying the various animals ov creashun, he kums to tew the konclusion that the best thing he can do is tew bekum a frog. This iz the way that frogs fust cum tew be made, and pollywoggs tew be

THE BULL HEAD.

This remarkable beast of prey dwells in mill ponds and mud puddles, cluss to the ground, and lives upon young liz-They hav no taste to their mouths, and never spit out ennything that they kan swallo. They have two ugly black thorns sticking out on the sides ov their hed, and are az dangerous tew handle az a six-bl: d:d penknife, with the blades all open to onst. They are like a kat; you have got to skin them before they are fit to eat, and after they are thoroughly cooked, if you set them away in the cupboard until they git cold, they will begin life anew, and become as raw as a live mule. They will live after they are dead, as long az striped snaiks kan.

I dont advise enny man to fish for bull-heads, but if yu feel az tho yu must, this is the only best way to do

Take a dark, hot, drizzly night in the mouth of June; steal out quietly from home; tell yure folks yu are going to the nabors to borry a setting of hen's eggs; find a saw-log on the banks ov a stagpant mill-pond, with one end in the water; drive the mudturkles and watersaiks owff from the log; straddle the log, and let yure leggs hang in the water up tew yure garters; bait yure hook with a chunk ov old injun-rubber shoe; az fast az yu pull up the bull-heads, take them by the back ov the neck and stab their horns into the saw. log; when yu hav got the saw-log stuck full, shoulder the saw-log and leave for home; git up the next morning early' skin the bull heads, split up the sawlog into kindling wood, let yure wife cook them for brekfast, and sware the whole family to keep dark about it. This iz the only respektable way to have eunything to do with bull heads.

SPECIAL NOTICE. These Pills were formerly put up under the name of "Sir James Clarke's Female Pills," and the very great celebrity they have attained, has induced unprincipled persons to prepare base and worthless imitations-copying the style of my wrappers and matter of my circulars so closely as almost sure to deceive the purchaser. I have therefore concluded to discard all my old style of wrappers, circulars, &c., and in future will put the Pills up in an entirely new and different style, under my own name, as the "GREAT FEMALE REMEDY,

JOB MOSES' PERIODICAL PILLS" CAUTION .- To insure getting the genuine Female Pills, see that each bottle has my name, or the letters T. & M. blown in the glass, and wrapped in a neat steel plate cut, on which are printed on white ground the words- 'THE GREAT FEMALE REMEDY, JOB MOSES' PERIODICAL PILLS," also my note of hand on one side of the wrapper.
