Scientific physicians know that medicines may be formed of severaling redients in certain fixed proportions of greater power, and producing effects which could never result from the use of any one of them, or in different combinations. Thus in the preparation of this oil a chemical change takes place, forming a compound which could not by any possibility be made from any other combination or proportions of the same ingredients, or any other ingredients, and entirely different from anything ever before made, one which produces the most astonishing results, and having a wider range application than any medicine ever before discovered. POETRY. WHO IS HE?

Who is this with form so portly, Mein and manner rough, uncourtly? Myth, or man of modern mystery, Hailing from Australian shore? Is the name he bears untarnished? Is the tale he tells unvarnished? Are these secrets in his history?

Time will show us nothing more. Is he lowly, is he rich-born? Is he Orton, is he Tichborne? Is he persecuted claimant, Or unmitigated bore?

Was he lost on board the Bella?

Did he gain the shore -poor fella !

With a minimum of raiment? Time will show us nothing more. Is he rogue, or real Sir Roger? Ba.onet, or artful dodger? Has his fickle mem'ry faded In the mistiness of yore? Do the H's, ever dropping,

Make him born by banks of Wapping,

Where the long-lost Orton traded? Time will show us-flothing more. Facing, without hesitation, Fire of cross-examination, Fierce with all the cunning beauty Of the wills of legal lore & When will counsel lose their fury?
