"I will keep the kisses I have got from you already," cried I. "I will keep the ones I wanted and that were something worth; I will not be kissed in penitance."

"What can you be thinking of this miserable girl " says she.

"What I am trying to tell you all this while," said I, "that you had best leave me alone, whom you can make no more unhappy if you tried, and turn your attention to James More, your father, with whom you are like to have a queer pirn to wind."

"Oh, that I must be going out into the world alone with such a man!" cried, and seemed to catch herself; with a great effort. "But trouble your self no more for that," said she. "He does not know what kind of nature i in my heart. He will pay me dear for this day of it-dear, dear will he pay. She turned and began to go home and I to accompany her, at which sh stopped.
