THAT CHAMBERMAIDIC BRAIN. A Bit of Casuistry Indulged In by a Hotel Worker.

"To ine," remarked the visiting drum. mer with a room on the top floor of the hotel, "who always plays the dollar limit in rooming myself at the hotel, the top floor chambermaid is an ever present help in time of trouble—that is to say, I always call on her when I need anything, and she cannot furnish it horself she can suggest a way out of my troubles. In other words, she is a great thinker, as women,

"For instance, about a week ago I struck this town of Chicago and flew high. I had to reach the dollar limit, for I had not been here before in ten or a dozen years. The next morning being Sunday, I discovered that a button was lost off my overcoat, and of course there were no tailor shops open, so I called on the chambermaid and told her what was wanted. "I think,' she said in good Chicago Irish, 'that you can do it better yourself. " 'Why do you think that?' said I. " 'You can, can't you?' said she, coming back that way so as not to commit " 'Of course I can,' said I, 'but how did you know it? Do I look like a man who sewed on his own buttons?' " 'No, sir; not that, sir,' she explained,

'but I've noticed that the man who takes a room on the top floor is able to do a good deal more for himself than the dude that hires apartments on the parlor floor. Perhaps you've noticed it yourself, sir.' "That put me to thinking," concluded the drummer, "and I saw in a minute that the chambermaid was on to a universal fact that had never occurred to me before."-Chicago Inter Ocean.

Took His Medicine In a Novel Way. A tall, thin man boarded the California express at Kansas City and settled himself comfortably in the seat of his section. Occasionally he would glance at his watch and about every two hours he would walk back to the water cooler and take "What time do you get to Dodge City?"

he asked the porter. "At 10:30, sir," answered the porter. "What time do you get to Coolidge?" he

"At 1:12, sir," answered the porter. "Yes, that's it," said the passenger. "Call me when you get to Coolidge." In time for the man to get up and dress so as to get off at Coolidge the porter

"Is this Coolidge?" asked the passenger. "No, but you will have time to dress. "I don't want to dress. I asked you to call me at Coolidge, didn't I?" "Yes, sir, but we stop there but a few minutes. Don't you want to get off there?" "No, I don't want to get off there. want to take some medicine, and when we get to Coolidge it will be time to take it."-Topeka State Journal.

HTFUL FORCE GENE BY THE EXPLOSION

It has been calculated that only about the moment of explosion, and on solidity A great many other combinations take place, and various solids are formed which inch guns of the United States wanhing the cannon of about 43 tons to the square inch. This force serves to start the projectile and develops a speed of 2,019 feet per second by the time the shot reaches the muzzle of the cannon. Up to this stage of port which plays such havoc with the nerves of the gunners is not caused by the explosion itself. But as the projectie emerges from the muzzle it leaves behind it a vacuum in the barrel of the gun, and the report is caused by the air in its rush to fill up this empty space. The forces exerted by these games in exanding seem to radiate in all directions from the eannon, as rippies are caused by dropping a pebble in a pool of still water. As a matter of fact, it has been discovered that these lines of forces are exceedingly complicated affairs and play very queer pranks about the cannon. As a result few people know just which is the safest or the most dangerous position for a gunner to take beside his gun. The center of disturbance at the moment of explosion is the mouth of the gun. In the case of the great 13 inch guns on our monitors a position back of the gun is much easier than one near who muzzle. In addition to this force there is an immense pressure excrted on the sides of the cannon, so that another distinct series of shocks also radiates outward from the barrel of the gun. These are in turn more or less compensated by the forces of the air i opposing them as it rushes into the mouth of the cannon when the projectile leaves As a result of all these forces the at-Although no projectile strikes the gunner, visible lines of force or vibrations which bombard, as it were, every part of the gunner's body at the same time. An examination and analysis of the effect produced upon the human system and the mind by the firing of a cannon is most engrossing. drums split or the action of their heart Take the vital organ, the heart, first. In the space between the right auricle and ventricle are a set of fine, threadlike cords called the tendina. The concussion makes them tremble like timbers in a building when there is an earthquake. In a weak man the chamber of the heart is left open for an instant, the opening and closing springs lose their control, the heart shakes, possibly the chordæ tendinæ are snapped, contraction or dilation of the organ ensues and in some instances

Deafness induced by an explosion may be traced to the sudden pressure upon the inner orifice of the ear and the tremendous vibration set up. The thin, transparent, fairly bright membrane called the drum of the car is burst, like a piece of tissue paper held taut and forcibly blown upon, a temporary disturbance of the mind occurs and the sufferer becomes dizzy. When the knees tremble, it is due to the nervous shock produced in the cerebellum. All the nerves and muscles are thrown into atonic contractions and relaxations and

Nausea is also caused by the physiological change that takes place in the brain. There is a pressure of blood there, and the stomach, responding, tries to empty itself. The whole nervous system, which resembles a mass of fibrous roots running all over the body, is affected when a cannon as large as an 8 inch gun is fired in Other outward manifestations occur when a gun goes off. For instance, clothes may be torn or a man even knocked down by the concussion. At the battle of the Yalu Captain Philo McGiffin, who was standing near a 6 inch gun, had his trousers torn into ribbons on one leg and a long rent in the other, his uniform was as full of holes as a moth eaten jacket, and he was nearly blinded and stunned.—New York World.

Embarrassing For Him.

An unusual incident occurred at a recent Alleghany wedding. The bride and groom were both well known to the officiating minister, the former especially being almost as close to him as a daughter. After the ccremony was over the best man handed to the clergyman an envelope in which was inclosed the fee for his services. The minister's back was toward the other guests in the room, and the incident would have probably passed unnoticed but for what followed. Turning to the happy and blushing bride, he said, "Here, my dear, is my wedding present," and handed her the envelope without having opened it The bride, of course, was delighted, while the feelings of the groom would probably have been a little more difficult to analyza. -Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph
