"My Dear Sister Mary.
"In answer to your letter, I can assure you that you must not conceive me to be wanting in those finer feelings which are the chief adornment of humanity. It is true that for some years, absorbed as I have been in affairs of the highest importance, I have seldom taken a peein my hand, for which I can assure you that I have been 'reproached by many des plus charmantes of your charming sex. At the present moment I lie abed (having stayed late in order to pay compliment to the Marchioguess of Dover at her ball last night), and this is written of the will be and the prince at Brighton next to the prince at Brighton to the sake of seeing both and him. Make no was a late of seeing both and him. Make no was a late of seeing both and him. Make no was a late of seeing both and him. Make no was a late of seeing both and him. Make no was a late of seeing both and him. Make no was a late of seeing both and him. Make no was a late of seeing both and him. Make no was a late of seeing both and him. Make no was a late of seeing both and him. Make no was a late of seeing both and him. Make no was a late of seeing which is seen the manual and furly seed to death a servant in dark livery behind. I say nothing of women—save only the once. That was with Lord Avon. We were of an ago, he a few years perhaps my senior, but our tastes, our judgments and our characters were alike, save only that he had in him a touch of pride such as I have never known in any other arich young man of fashion, less in a rich young man of fashion, less in a rich young man of fashion, less in the descretions d'une jeunesse doice, I could descretions d'une jeunesse doice, I could he. "Charles, if you will call to mind the relation in which I stood to Lord Avon. He spoke with some dignity of manuely eight hundred a year," my uncle answered.

I saw my poor father's face grown in an instant.

"I beg your pardon, Sir Charles," said he. "I had come in to ask you if you had any orders for me, and I did not like to interrupt the young gentleman's story. I am afraid that I have been somewhat carried away by it."

"I never knew you forget yourself ter."

"On how much sir." asked my father, "On how much sir." asked my father, "On how much sir." asked my father,

"On how much, sir," asked my father, his jaunty manner. "When a man can brew a dish of chocolate or tie a cravat, as Ambrose does, he may claim consideration. The fact is that the poor "Tut, sir!" cried my uncle. "I al-
