SOME OF WARD'S PRANKS. The Ructions Which Artemus Raised While He Was a Reporter. "Talking of Artemus Ward," said George Hoyt recently, "reminds me of > several Ward anecdotes. Ward's newspaper life was one of laughable adventure. He injected his spirit of humor into almost everything he dad. "Ward's first remarkable break occurred soon after he started to work in Cleveland in 1897. J. W. Gray, city editor of the paper with which he was connected, gave Artemus an assignment on what promised to be the leading social event of the season. The elite society of the city was to give a concert for the benefit of some charitable event at Neil hall, Academy of Music. "Ward's copy went in without being passed on, and when the paper appeared Cleveland's Four Hundred were thrown into a spasm. Artemus had given a faith-
