Comes Fear, but That Soon Passes Away in the Eagerness For Killing. Varying Effects of Wounds

A narrative of the battle of Solferi-

Give me to drink.' Whereat my companion stooped to offer him a flask, and as he stooped the Tyrolese struck savagely at him with his bayonet, but my companion jumped back, and it missed him, and he said, You Tyrolese, you said you wanted a drink before you died, and now you shall die without the drink.' And he stuck his bayonet through him as a boy would stick a pin through a fly. "The fighting soon began again, and it was very fierce. It was soon that we came to know that we were to capture a little village and the hills about the village. The village was named San Maritino, and there were walled! barns and gardens, and the Austrians were very strong there.

"The bursting of the shells was very Sometimes all of us close by would be thrown down and be covered with mud and earth, but most of us would jump up again, not wounded, would not jump up again, because they were wounded or dead.

"At the beginning of a battle a soldier feels afraid. At the beginning of this battle I felt afraid, and I know that other men felt afraid, though h was not our first battle, and we knew what it was to be under fire.

"So it was that at the beginning we commended ourselves; we felt like death, but soon that passed away, and we thought no more of death, but only of the killing of the Austrians. "All around me men were killed.

There were heads and arms blown off, and men flew into pieces like the smashing of a jug. But we did not care. We thought nothing of it. do not know that we even knew we be brave, but when she finally vensaw such things, but some of them tured out about halfway the cheers come to me as I sit with you and talk of that long day. We did not netice, and we did not think that at any moment we too might have our heads blown off or be smashed into little pieces like the breaking of a jug. "Once, when we rushed over the big > fought with us, we turned the guns to fire on the Austrians as they flew away, but they had driven bits of steel into the touchholes, and so we could, not fire them. They were of a courage, those Austrians. "Only once in all that battle did I think much of what I saw or heard, and that was when there was the terrible screaming of a captain who had his foot shot off. He twisted and RE-OPENING OF BUTCHER SHOP turned as he cried out, and it was a very bad sound. But it is just as it chances. I saw many men who were burst worse than that captain and many who were blown into little bits, but I did not trouble about them. It is just if it chances so. "It is very often that a man does not know that he is hurt. I remember that once there was a man near me with a great hole in his forehead, but he ran right on with us with his bayonet, and I thought, 'He will fall dead.' But after that I saw him no more, for there was always the fighting. "The storm and the blackness, they made of us a great mixing. Yes; it was a very great tangling, for all lines
