Why a Scotch Farmer Refused a Portion of Dessert. Could the funny sayings and incidents at the tenants' dinners in Scotland be collected they would make an unrivated book of humor. Mistakes o amusing and somet mes embarrassing nature occur frequently at such functions. One story is told of a guest at a Scottish tenants' dinner who tasted ice cream for the first time on that occasion. He pushed a large spoonful of the frozen mixture into his mouth and jumped from his chair with agony expressed on his face. He let out a yell and criel out, "Ow, ow, ma rotten tooth!" and could not be induced to eat any more. At another Scottish affair of the kind a good old farmer was scated next to fall to explain it. the hostess. She served him a bit of savory omelet, which seemed to cause the old man deep disappointment. His idea of an omelet had always been a and after tasting the sample before him he turned to the hostess and said, "Weel, n.a lady, I canna compliment you on your puddin's."

The late Duke of Bucclench told a story of a tenant at one of the farmers' dinners on his estates who was asked by the duchess if he would take some rhubarb, a dish she was fond of. The farmer was surprised, but answered politely, "I'm muckle obleeged to your ! grace, but I dinna' need it."

There was a little dispute at a well known botel over a mistake in an order of trout and chicken that made a difference of several dollars on a check for a rather simple dinner for two. It was settled "out of court," as it were, and quite agreeably, but hotel managers regret and try to avoid these mistakes, especially when the customer is a regular visitor, for they know he never forgets the details of his eating and is slow to forgive an error.

Another peculiarity of diners is as to the location of tables. Some persons cling to one table and feel aggrieved when they find another in their favorite seat. Restaurant proprietors have tried to understand this peculiarity of their patrons, but have to admit they
