UNREPENTANT LIBERALS.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is still obsessed the notion that Liberal Unionists parte from him in a moment of aberration, and are smitten with remorse. His speech at ' the Eastern Ontario Liberal Convention' was marred by an affront, perhaps unintentional, to the self-respect of Liberals who could not see eye to eye with him on' the conscription issue and took the only consistent course open to them. arging that the past be forgotten, he implied that they had done something to be

"If a man comes to me and tells I was a Unionist at the last election,' I will tell him: friend, I will not rebuke you for it. You have rebuked yourself already sufficiently. the breach, he has lost his wonted tact going out of the country. and diplomacy. Either he does not understand the situation or he is wilfully blind to it. He compelled Liberals before the last election to choose between bimself and the Military Service Act Those who believed compulsory service to be necessary to the full performance Canada's duty to the cause of the Allies had to uphold the Government pledge to it against a party leader pledged to suspension. They have no regrets ar no apologies. They are not penitent chastened, and they do not intend to pe form the rite of self-repudiation which Sir Wilfrid expects of them before they are graciously permitted to run at the wheels of his chariot. He must dismiss from his mind the idea that Liberals who! were true to their conception of what Canada should do to aid in defending lib erty and civilization inflicted on him : personal injury for which they should inake some atonement.
