In the previous parable the responsibilities of the subjects of the kingdom were before us for consideration in the light of the obligation to render to the householder the fruits of his vineyard. In this one the ethic blessings of the kingdom are placed 12,000 pounds, set on top of him, he than paying rent to a king; it is feasting at the King's table on fat things which He has prepared with great ex-attitude of the Jewish people toward the king up to the crucifixion Christ. This one carries us beyond the cross, even through the present age of the Gentiles. The marriage feast which the king made for his son and to which he invited guests represents the gracious offer of God to give joy and blessing to certain of His creatures. This feast has been made in honor of his Son and is an exceeding rich one. His oxen and fatlings ner are ready. His repeated invitations show God's earnestness in seeking to bless men. God does more than simply invite men once; He presses after he had made such costly preparation deserves the severest punish-
