Everybody knows what Christo-1 pher Columbus did, but nobody knows for certain what he was. Hitherto the accepted belief has been that he was an Italian, born in Genoa. That has been taught in all the school books in the world, except the Spanish books. In these he is listed as a Spaniard, and in an effort to prove that the Spanish books are right the Government of Spain has appointed a commission of learned men, culled from several nations, to investigate the matter and declare once for all of what race was the discoverer of America. This commission will not have to decide mesely between the claims of Italy and Spain. It will have to look into representations put forth on behalf,
