GOVERNMENT BY COMMISSION

(Toronto Telegram)

Hon. E. C. Drury's method of governing the province by a number of commissions is without precedent. I provides remunerative jobs for friends of the party in power without rendering any useful public service.

Under the commission system handling public issues the province does not receive and the Government the dozen, the gross, and also the does not want decisions based on equity. It is a cowardly attempt to evade responsibility which must ultimately be assumed by the Government. It simply means that the province is paying out thousands of do lars for so-called Royal Commissions which are created for the purpose handling questions which the Govern ment either lacks the courage or th ability to deal with themselves.

Poor In Balkan Countries Have Hard

To the English visitor, accustomed to the ordinary comforts of life, it is a source of wonderment how the peasants and poor of the Balkans are able to exist on the meagre food they have. Corn bread of poor quality forms the diet of a large part of the village population. This slender diet

He is so bent and weather-scarred that he looks twice his age after thirty. some cases he belongs to nomadic tribes and leads an existence unknown in the country district of England. At night one often passes whole wagon-loads of them on the road going from town to town. Every man is asleep on the top of his load, and glars or highwaymen.

The peasant removes his hat to every one better dressed than himself and gets his ox-cart off the road for every motor-car that passes. He is a simple, honest, home-loving person, with much homely virtue. The peasant women have enormous families of children, about half of whom survive the rigors of child life in the extreme conditions that prevail in the

Telling Time By the Sun. You may have wondered sometimes how it is that whilst most of our counting is done in tens, we have several examples of reckoning by twelves, such as the half-dozen, divisions of the year and of the day. The reason is that in the old days there were two quite distinct systems of calculating. The Jews and Arabs used their ten fingers as an aid to. addition, and from them we get the to merit decimal system. But other early peoples had a system of counting founded not on the number of their fingers, but on the movements of the sun. They adopted as their unit the Hadfield, Alice Hadfield.

The Mirrors of Doom.

If an earthquake takes place at the other side of the world, it writes its own, record on the delicate instruments kept in the observatories in this country.

Next morning you will see in the papers that our instruments have recorded an earthquake of great violence which took place in South America. It may be days before nev comes through by telegraph from the scene of the upheaval to confirm the instrument's message.

The seismograph, as the earthquake recorder is called, ()nsists of a revolving drum and a tiny mirror The latter is balanced so delicately that the slightest tremor of the earth's crust will set it dancing. The drum, which is turned by clockwork is covered with a roll of sensitized photographic paper. The mirror focuses a little point of light, reflected from a brilliant lamp, on to the

So long as nothing is happening the mirror remains at rest, and as the drum revolves a perfectly straight line is traced on the paper by the point of light. But as soon as a shock occurs the mirror is agitated and the line becomes a zigzag. A stone thrown into a pond sets up ripples which move outwards in ever-widening circles until they reach the edge. An earthquake produces the same result, except that the rip ples are formed in the earth's hard but slightly elastic crust. Fortunately, serious earthquakes are rare, but hundreds of small shocks take place every day, and seismographs of the most delicate
