fassacred Nation. The French pact with Mustapha Kemal resulting in the withdrawal of the pollu from Cilicia, and a new massacre of 25,000 Armenians, furnishes Prof. Angelo Hall, United States Naval Academy, with the text for a slashing attack on France, published in "The New Armenia."

"One recalls the bloody days of the French Revolution, when the fanatics of France, like the fanatics of Turkey, took a flendish delight in shedding human blood," writes the professor. "Perhaps there is a bond of sympathy between Frenchman and

After this explanation, he turns to urge England and the United States to occupy Cilicia, which is the province where the Armenians have found refuge during the past two years, or up to the time Mustapha's friends were let loose again. "Our President and Secretary of State will second any effort England may make," he says. In the same magazine Viscount Bryce attacks France on legal grounds, urging that Cilicia i mandated territory, and that France has broken her word and agreement as a member of the League of Nations by entering into the pact with Kemal and evacuating the province. Lord Bryce points out that France is playing into the hands of the pan-Islamic fanatics who are stirring all the East against Britain. He also contends that Britain, as a party of the Treaty of Sevres (which ended the war with Turkey), and as a member of the League, is bound to carry out the obligations of France.

All of which is sound enough, but it will not help the Armenians one whit. Armenia is a country lacking in natural resources to be developed. and her people are not a popular

Neither will the appeal of an Italian archbishop to Cardinal Dubois, of Paris, succeed, for economics rather than religion is the potent factor at the Quai d'Orsay. The archbishop, who has just toured Cilicia, reminds the cardinal that 250,000 Christians living there are in hourly peril of death, and that at Marsovan 25,000 have already been butchered. Hopeful signs are that the British newspapers have lined up on the side of the oppressed Christians and that Secretary of State Hughes has been exerting influence to moderate the Turk. L'Eclair, of Paris, points out that after the Armenians are all gone, the Turk may invade Syria and then France may have to reconquer
