Public Forests In Bulgaria. In Bulgaria haif the forested land is in community forests and one-third is owned by the Government, so that more than 80 per cent. of the total is in some kind of public ownership. As in the United States, the Federal forest lands are situated principally in the mountain regions. The community forests are chiefly in those portions of the country that are least heavily forested. Among the most important species in the Bulgarian forests, which total some 3,000,000 hectares, are the hardwoods: oak, beech, ash, elm,
