PAYMENT REFUSED.

Oakville, April 9.—The refusal of Trafalgar township council to remunerate the Oakville fire brigade on the occasions when the reels are called to fires outside the corporation area was discussed at the meeting of Oakville town council Monday night. The matter was brought up when members of the Oakville brigade asked for more money for fire runs.

IMPROVING ON NATURE

Animals Increase In Size After They Become Domesticated. A ca: weighing between thirty-four and thirty-five pounds was on view at the recent Crystal Palace Cat Show in England. This creature is about four times the weight of an ordinary tame cat, and more than twice as heavy as a wild cat. Nothing in nature is more remark-Make up your mind to day that you will thoroughly convince you that by able than the way in which man, by careful breeding and feeding, can increase the size of the animals which he has domesticated.

Take the case of dogs. Wolves survived in Ireland to a comparatively late date. It is said that the last was not killed till 1768. Now, the wolf is a large animal. Its height is thirtystain or leave a greasy residue and wolves the Irish wolfhound was bred, ty-eight inches at the shoulder was the standard height, and there is a record of one which was four feet

Another example is the Great Dane, bred for boar-hunting. St. Bernard dogs have reached the enormous weight of 250 pounds, or, say, two-thirds the size of a fullgrown lion.

The original wild horse, still found in Asia, stands twelve to thirteen hands in height. Compare it with the modern thoroughbred of sixteen to seventeen hands, or with the great dray horse. A British dray horse has been known to stand eighteen hands high and weigh 18 cwts., and a Clydesdale exhibited some years ago in New York was twenty and a half hands in height and weighed very nearly a man a half.
