This Company is today in successful operation in Toronto, operating one plant that has more than doubled its output since last August. Expansion will continue through the development of additional routes and the acquisition of other companies. This company is the amalgamation of the old Crescent Dairy, Toronto, and the Hancock Dairy of New Toronto, which have been operating for many years. During this period the management have been engaged in establishing an efficient economical organization. There has also been built up a strong, aggressive sales force which is producing splendid results. The goodwill valuation placed on the business is comparatively low, being only about one-half that or Caulfield's Dairy, Limited, (with which the management was formerly identified), at a similar period of development. Cauffield's Dairy, Limited, when sold to The Borden Company, realized for their goodwill a sum approximating five times its book value. As the business grows,
