With seventy per cent. of the press against him, he had again become the head of a great nation because of the will of the people. This power of the people is one of the most significant and rapid growths in the world to-day.

Touching on the conscription issue so much in the eye of Canadians, Mr. Brown reviewed some of his own experiences in World War I. Some of the conditions of our boys at the present front was contrasted vividly with those of Mr. Brown's experience when they were constantly relieved by fresh men. Answering a question, the candidate said that until the whole financial system of Canada is overhauled the money given to soldiers for rehabilitation was very likely to find its way into the clutches of mortgage companies.
